The Minor Marshallians and Alfred Marshall
An evaluation

Peter Groenewegen
Contents

Preface and acknowledgements xv

1 Introduction: ten ‘Minor Marshallians’ and spreading the economic organon 1

4 Charles Percy Sanger (1871–1930): a brilliant student of Marshall from the 1890s, briefly captured for economics 38

5 Sydney John Chapman (1871–1951): labour economics, public finance, economic principles and economic history – a Marshall student of great academic distinction 52

7 David Hutchinson MacGregor (1877–1953): a ‘favourite’ student of Marshall and an innovative Marshallian industry economist 82

8 Frederick Lavington (1881–1927): an able Cambridge monetary theorist cut off in his prime, and a very loyal Marshallian 99
Contents

9 Walter Layton (1884–1966) on The Theory of Prices (1912) and The Relations of Labour and Capital (1914): Marshallian texts pur sang? 120

10 Charles Ryle Fay (1884–1961): a devoted teacher of economic history and one of Marshall’s favourite Cambridge pupils 136

11 Gerald Shove (1888–1947): an enduring Marshallian loyalist 149

12 Conclusions: ten ‘Minor Marshallians’ – spreading Marshall’s organon of economics to later generations 170

Bibliography 178

Index 188