Development of China in the Modern World System

LU De-ming
Table of Contents

Preface ....................................................................................................................... ix

Chapter 1

The Analysis of the Modern World System. ................................................................. 1
  1.1 Introduction: The China Miracle in the Context of International Development 1
  1.2 The Characteristics of the Modern World System 7
  1.3 The Change of the Market Structure in the Modern New World System 11
  1.4 The Opportunity Window for Late Development 16

Chapter 2

The Opening Strategy for the Development of China. ................................................ 21
  2.1 Opening the Opportunity Window: Deng Xiaoping on Opening Up 21
  2.2 Special Economic Zones (SEZs), Opening of Coastal Cities, and the Case of Shenzhen 26
  2.3 Pudong New District, Opening of Yangtze River and Border Cities, and the Development of the Central and Western Areas 34
  2.4 The Overall Opening since the Accession to the WTO 40
  2.5 The Relative Advantages of the Sino-Foreign Coopetition in the Opening Up Process 43
  2.6 Case Study of the Accession to the WTO: The Dynamic Win-Win Game of 15 Years 45

Chapter 3

Relative Development in International Trade ............................................................... 53
  3.1 The Reform and Opening of the Foreign Trade System and Policies in China 53
  3.2 The Growth of Export Trade 59
  3.3 The Growth of Import Trade 72
  3.4 The Relative Advantages of the Sino-Foreign Trade Coopetition 79
  3.5 Case Analysis: The Pearl River Delta and the Yangtze River Delta 85

Chapter 4

Relative Development in International Investment ...................................................... 91
  4.1 Capital Accumulation and Economic Growth in China 91
  4.2 Foreign Direct Investment (FDI) 97
  4.3 Overseas Direct Investment 107
TABLE OF CONTENTS

4.4 Relative Advantages of the Sino-Foreign Investment Coopetition  111
4.5 Cases of Dongguan, Kunshan, and Dalian  115

Chapter 5
The International Flow of Human Capital ........................................ 121
5.1 The Late Development Advantage of Labor Resources in China  121
5.2 Education, Accumulation, and International Exchange of Human Capital  123
5.3 Science Accumulation and International Exchange of Science and Knowledge Capital  133
5.4 “Learning by Doing” in the International Processing Trade  141
5.5 Relative Advantages of the Sino-Foreign Talent Coopetition and Flow  146

Chapter 6
The International Transfer of Technical Advancement ...................... 151
6.1 Two Mechanisms for Promoting Technical Advancement  152
6.2 Technology Import and Learning in China  156
6.3 Technical Advancement in Some Representative Industries  160
6.4 Relative Advantages of the Sino-Foreign Technological Coopetition  168

Chapter 7
Management Learning and the Institutional Evolution ....................... 173
7.1 Learning Enterprise Management Experience  173
7.2 Learning Government Administration Policy  180
7.3 Institutional Learning and Innovation  188
7.4 Relative Advantages of the Sino-Foreign Coopetition in Management Institutions  197

Chapter 8
Challenges Ahead ........................................................................ 203
8.1 Challenges from the World Product Market  203
8.2 Challenges from the World Energy and Resources Market  205
8.3 Challenges from Global Environmental Issues  209
8.4 Challenges from the Global Financial Market  212

Chapter 9
Conclusion: The Theory of Development Relativity ......................... 217
9.1 The Dual Economies Model  218
9.2 The Two Stages Model  225

---

30 YEARS OF CHINA'S REFORM STUDIES SERIES
TABLE OF CONTENTS

9.3 Historical Facts and Cases  229
9.4 Development Strategies  234

Bibliography .......................... 239

Index ................................ 249