

The Political Economy of Collective Skill Formation

Edited by
Marius R. Busemeyer and Christine Trampusch

OXFORD
UNIVERSITY PRESS

Table of Contents

List of Figures	xix
List of Tables	xxi
Notes on Contributors	xxiii
Abbreviations	xxv

Introduction

1. The Comparative Political Economy of Collective Skill Formation Marius R. Busemeyer and Christine Trampusch	3
--	---

Section I Country Studies

2. Political Institutions and the Origins of Collective Skill Formation Systems Cathie Jo Martin	41
3. Institutional Change in German Vocational Training: From Collectivism toward Segmentalism Kathleen Thelen and Marius R. Busemeyer	68
4. The Long Road to Collective Skill Formation in the Netherlands Karen M. Anderson and Dennie Oude Nijhuis	101
5. Educational Policy Actors as Stakeholders in the Development of the Collective Skill System: The Case of Switzerland Philipp Gonon and Markus Maurer	126
6. Austrian Corporatism and Institutional Change in the Relationship between Apprenticeship Training and School-Based VET Lukas Graf, Lorenz Lassnigg, and Justin J.W. Powell	150
7. Continued Collectivism: The Role of Trade Self-Management and the Social Democratic Party in Danish Vocational Education and Training Moirra Nelson	179

Section II Crosscutting Topics and Contemporary Challenges

8. Collective Skill Systems, Wage Bargaining, and Labor Market Stratification Marius R. Busemeyer and Torben Iversen	205
9. The Link between Vocational Training and Higher Education in Switzerland, Austria, and Germany Rita Nikolai and Christian Ebner	234
10. Gendered Consequences of Vocational Training Margarita Estévez-Abe	259
11. Europeanization and the Varying Responses in Collective Skill Systems Justin J.W. Powell and Christine Trampusch	284
Concluding Essay
12. Skills and Politics: General and Specific Wolfgang Streeck	317
Index	353