WHY ADJUDICATE?

ENFORCING TRADE RULES IN THE WTO

Christina L. Davis
Contents

List of Figures ix
List of Tables x
Acknowledgments xi
List of Abbreviations xv

1. Introduction 1
   The Enforcement of International Trade Law 6
   Overview 20

2. Domestic Constraints and Active Enforcement 26
   Trade Institutions and Liberalization 29
   Political Origins of Demand for Trade Enforcement 39
   Hypotheses for Trade Strategies 57
   Conclusion 60

3. The Democratic Propensity for Adjudication 62
   Why Are Democracies Litigious? 66
   Data 72
   Democratic Challengers 80
   Democratic Defendants 88
   Alliances and Dyadic Dispute Patterns 92
   Conclusion 100

4. The Litigious State: U.S. Trade Policy 102
   U.S. Role as Enforcer of Multilateral Trade Rules 104
   Legislative Constraints in U.S. Trade Policy 111
   The Kodak-Fuji Film Dispute 118
   Foreign Trade Barrier Dataset 123
   Statistical Analysis of U.S. Forum Choice 132
   Boeing-Airbus Dispute 138
   The China Problem 158
   Conclusion 182

5. The Reluctant Litigant: Japanese Trade Policy 185
   Defending Market Access for Japanese Exports 187
   Delegation in Japanese Trade Policy 195
   Statistical Analysis of Japanese Forum Choice 210
Active Adjudication Targeting U.S. Steel Protection 225
Other Solutions for China 233
Conclusion 241

6. Conflict Management: Evaluating the Effectiveness of Adjudication 244
Solving Hard Cases 246
Analysis of Progress to Remove Barrier 248
Analysis of Trade Dispute Duration 253
Conclusion 256

7. Level Playing Field? Adjudication by Developing Countries 258
Peru Challenges European Food Labeling 262
Vietnam and the Catfish Dispute 267
Conclusion 279

8. Conclusion 281
The Political Role of Adjudication 281
Conflict and Cooperation 293
Toward a Broader Theory of Legalization 297

Bibliography 301
Index 319