The Psychology of Negotiations in the 21st Century Workplace
New Challenges and New Solutions

Edited by
Barry M. Goldman
University of Arizona

Debra L. Shapiro
University of Maryland

Routledge
Taylor & Francis Group
New York London
SECTION 1  Introduction

Chapter 1  Negotiation in the 21st Century Workplace: New Challenges and New Solutions 3

Barry M. Goldman and Debra L. Shapiro
Introduction 3
A Fundamental Assumption of This Book: The Workplace of the 21st Century Necessitates Revisiting Earlier Management and Negotiation Advice 4
Key Messages 7
References 13

SECTION 2  Negotiators as Fairness Managers in the 21st Century

Chapter 2  The Effect of Perceived/Felt (In)Justice on Cooperativeness: Implications for Negotiators as “Justice-Enhancing Communicators” in an Era of Social Networking 17

Donald E. Conlon and William H. Ross
Introduction 17
Do Negotiators Who Perceive Fairness Behave More Cooperatively? 20
Chapter 3  The Role of Process Fairness Authenticity in 21st Century Negotiations................. 45

Kathryn S. Roloff, Joel Brockner, and Batia Mishan Wiesenfeld

Introduction ................................................................. 45
Chapter Purposes and Overview ....................................47
Perceptual Consequences of Inauthentic Fairness in Negotiations ................................................................. 54
Strategies to Boost Perceptions of Fairness Authenticity in Negotiations ................................................................. 59
21st Century Barriers to Authenticity ..................................62
Theoretical Implications and Future Research Questions.. 66
References ...........................................................................69

Chapter 4  The Effect of Perception on Judgments About “Fair” Compensation: Implications for Negotiators as Price Justifiers ........................................ 75

Robin L. Pinkley

Conventionally Prescribed Preparation and Exchange Strategies That Enable Negotiators to Claim Value, Create Value, or Avoid Suboptimal Agreements ..........79
Specific Advice for Employers and Employees Regarding the Application of Conventionally Prescribed Compensation Negotiation Strategies ..........95
Applying Previously Prescribed Compensation Negotiation Strategies to the 21st Century Workplace ......101
Chapter 5  The Effects of Subjective Value on Future Consequences: Implications for Negotiation Strategies

Hillary Anger Elfenbein and Jared R. Curhan

Introduction .......................................................... 115
What Is Subjective Value? ........................................... 116
Why Does Subjective Value Matter? .......................... 118
How Can Negotiators Enhance Their Counterpart’s Subjective Value? ............................................... 123
Why Enhancing Subjective Value in Negotiations May Be Particularly Important in the 21st Century Workplace ................................................................. 130
Future Research Needs Guided by Challenges in Enhancing Subjective Value in the 21st Century Workplace ................................................................. 133
Acknowledgments ..................................................... 135
Notes ........................................................................ 135
References ................................................................ 135

SECTION 3  Negotiators as Emotion Managers in the 21st Century

Chapter 6  The Effect of Moods and Discrete Emotions on Negotiator Behavior

Russell Cropanzano, William J. Becker, and Jöel Feldman

Introduction .......................................................... 141
Defining Affect: Moods and Emotions ........................ 143
Mood and Negotiation ............................................. 145
Specific Emotions and Negotiation ............................ 157
Emotion in Relationships ......................................... 169
Directions for Future Research ................................. 171
Conclusions .......................................................... 173
References ............................................................ 174
Chapter 7 Negotiating the Peace in the Face of Modern Distrust: Dealing With Anger and Revenge in the 21st Century Workplace

Robert J. Bies and Thomas M. Tripp

Introduction

Why Employees Engage in Revenge: Evidence and Insights From the Empirical Studies

Vengeance in Negotiations: Is It Really Such a Good Idea?

The 21st Century Challenges

Conflict-Mitigating Strategies: Practical Advice for Leaders and Managers

New Negotiation Research Questions for 21st Century Challenges

Conclusion

References

Chapter 8 Once Fooled, Shame on You! Twice Fooled, Shame on Me! What Deception Does to Deceivers and Victims: Implications for Negotiators When Ethicality Is Unclear

Roy J. Lewicki and Ralph Hanke

Introduction

Purpose of the Chapter

Trust, Distrust, and the Management of Information in Negotiation

The Nature of Trust: Different Kinds of Trust

Do Negotiators Engage in Deceptive Tactics?

Do Deceptive Negotiators Experience Ineffective Negotiations?

How Do Deceptive Negotiators Escape Punitive Consequences?

How Do Deceptive Negotiators Repair/Regain Trust?

How Do Negotiators Avoid Being Victims of Deception? Strategies for Recognizing, Confronting, and Minimizing Deception in Negotiations

21st Century Workplace Characteristics That May Affect Negotiators' Ability to Use Deceptive Management Strategies
How the Deceiver Presents Deceptions ................................................. 230
Detecting Deception in the 21st Century Virtual Negotiation Environment ................................................. 231
Future Research Needs ........................................................................ 235
Summary ................................................................................................. 237
Acknowledgment .................................................................................... 237
References ............................................................................................... 238

SECTION 4  Negotiators as Social Influence/
Group-Sensitive Managers in the 21st Century

Chapter 9  Social Networks and Negotiation ............................................. 245
  Daniel J. Brass and Giuseppe Labianca
  A Primer on Social Networks ............................................................... 246
  Social Networks and Implications for Negotiations ......................... 248
  21st Century Challenges and Opportunities ....................................... 261
  Conclusions ......................................................................................... 263
  Acknowledgment ............................................................................... 264
  References ......................................................................................... 264

Chapter 10  How Cultural Stereotyping Influences Intercultural Negotiation ......................................................... 269
  Catherine H. Tinsley, Nazli Turan, Laurie R. Weingart, and Robin L. Dillon-Merrill
  Introduction .......................................................................................... 269
  Stereotyping and Social Categorization .............................................. 271
  Stereotyping, Culture, and Negotiation ............................................ 273
  Advice for Intercultural Negotiators .................................................... 278
  21st Century Workplace Challenges and Their Research Implications for Cross-Cultural Negotiations .... 284
  Summary ............................................................................................... 286
  Acknowledgment ................................................................................ 287
  Note .................................................................................................... 287
  References ........................................................................................... 288

Chapter 11  Gender and Negotiation .......................................................... 293
  Michael P. Haselhuhn and Laura J. Kray
  Introduction ........................................................................................ 293
Chapter 14 The “New” World of Negotiating: Interactions Mediated by Information Technology .......................... 399

Ritu Agarwal, Siva Viswanathan, and Animesh Animesh

Introduction ........................................................................ 399
A Transaction Cost Approach to Negotiating .................. 400
The Contact Stage ............................................................. 401
The Contract Stage ............................................................. 416
The Control Stage ............................................................... 424
Are IT-Enabled Transactions Equally Accessible in the Global Workplace of the 21st Century? ................. 431
Questions in Need of Future Research ......................... 432
Note ................................................................................ 434
References ........................................................................ 434

SECTION 6 Commentaries

Chapter 15 Negotiating in a Brave New World: Challenges and Opportunities for the Field of Negotiation Science .... 443

Michele J. Gelfand and Ya’akov (Kobi) Gal

Introduction ........................................................................ 443
Reconceptualizing Negotiation ...................................... 444
The Open Systems View of Negotiation: Implications for Cross-Level Modeling in Negotiation .......................... 447
The Interdisciplinary Mandate: Toward a Negotiation Science............................................................................. 454
Conclusion.......................................................................................................................... 460
Acknowledgment.................................................................................................................. 460
References.................................................................................................................................. 460

Chapter 16 Integrating Negotiation Research With Team Dynamics................................................................. 465
Leigh Thompson, Erika Richardson, and Brian Lucas
Introduction ........................................................................................................................................ 465
Fairness in Teams and Negotiation .................................................................................................. 466
Emotional and Affective Processing in Teams and Negotiation............................................................ 470
Social Influence in Groups and Negotiation .................................................................................. 473
Organizational Perspectives in Groups and Negotiation ..................................................................... 476
Conclusion........................................................................................................................................ 480
References........................................................................................................................................ 480

Chapter 17 Commentary and Future Directions for Negotiations 485
Chia-Jung Tsay and Max H. Bazerman
Introduction ........................................................................................................................................ 485
Fairness and Ethicality ......................................................................................................................... 486
Emotions.......................................................................................................................................... 489
Diversity.......................................................................................................................................... 493
Is the 21st Century Remarkably Different? A Cautionary Note........................................................... 496
References........................................................................................................................................ 497

Author Index..................................................................................................................................... 503
Subject Index..................................................................................................................................... 521