Competing Through Innovation
Technology Strategy and Antitrust Policies

David J. Teece
Thomas W. Tusher Professor in Global Business and Faculty Director at the Institute for Business Innovation, Haas School of Business, University of California, Berkeley and Chairman of the Berkeley Research Group, LLC

Edward Elgar
Cheltenham, UK • Northampton, MA, USA
Contents

Acknowledgements vii
Preface ix
Innovation Shapes Competition and Policy in the Digital Economy xvi

PART I INNOVATION, MARKET DEFINITION AND MONOPOLY

1 David J. Teece (2003), ‘The Strategic Management of Technology and Intellectual Property’, in David O. Faulkner and Andrew Campbell (eds), Oxford
   Handbook of Strategy: A Strategy Overview and Competitive Strategy, Volume I,
   Chapter 6, Oxford, UK: Oxford University Press, 138–72, reset 3
2 Thomas M. Jorde, J. Gregory Sidak and David J. Teece (2000), ‘Innovation,
   Investment, and Unbundling’, Yale Journal on Regulation, 17 (1), Winter, 1–37 31
   Analysis in High-Technology Industries’, Antitrust Bulletin, Fall/Winter, 801–57 68
4 J. Gregory Sidak and David J. Teece (2009), ‘Dynamic Competition in Antitrust

PART II INTELLECTUAL PROPERTY AND ANTITRUST ISSUES

5 Deepak Somaya, David Teece and Simon Wakeman (2011), ‘Innovation in Multi-Invention Contexts: Mapping Solutions to Technological and Intellectual Property Complexity’, California Management Review, 53 (4), Summer, 47–79 179
6 David J. Teece and Edward F. Sherry (2003), ‘Standards Setting and Antitrust’,
   Minnesota Law Review, 87 (6), June, 1913–94 212

PART III APPLYING ANTITRUST PRINCIPLES

8 Thomas M. Jorde and David J. Teece (1993), ‘Rule of Reason Analysis of Horizontal Arrangements: Agreements Designed to Advance Innovation and Commercialize Technology’, Antitrust Law Journal, 61 (2), Fall, 579–619 319
9 Christopher Pleatsikas and David Teece (2001), ‘Economic Fallacies
   Encountered in the Law of Antitrust: Illustrations from Australia and New