

Alternatives to Neoliberal Globalization

Studies in the Political Economy of Institutions and Late Development

Dic Lo

School of Oriental and African Studies, University of London

palgrave
macmillan

Contents

List of Tables and Figures	viii
Preface and Acknowledgements	ix
1 Overview	1
1.1 World development under globalization and policy doctrines	1
1.2 Comparative studies of institutions and systemic dynamics	4
1.3 The theme and structure of the book	6
2 Theoretical and Policy Doctrines in Late Development	10
2.1 Opening up the policy debate on industrialization	10
2.2 'Trade regime neutrality' and its criticism	13
2.3 The new international division of labour	17
2.4 Techno-economic paradigms and industrialization	23
2.5 Industrial policy reconstructed, more than market-friendly	30
2.6 Summaries and conclusions	34
3 Efficiency, Efficient Institutions, and Globalization	37
3.1 Neoliberalism, rationality, and efficiency	37
3.2 What's new with the new comparative economics?	39
3.3 In the lens of techno-economic paradigms	46
3.4 Institutions and the limits to capitalist transformation	50
3.5 Summaries and conclusions	56
4 The Division of Labour and Institutions of Economic Development	58
4.1 Institutions and the principle of comparative efficiency	58
4.2 Theories of the market system and economic development	60
4.3 Institutions and the reintegration of the division of labour	67
4.4 Summaries and conclusions	75
5 Late Development in Globalization: The East Asian Phenomenon	77
5.1 East Asia and the paradigmatic crisis of developmentalism	77

5.2	The crisis: Crony capitalism versus speculative capital gone into panic	79
5.3	The miracle: Natural path of development versus specific history	82
5.4	The breakdown of the region-wide regime of accumulation	88
5.5	The policy debate: Upheaval in East Asia, consensus in Washington	93
5.6	Summaries and conclusions	98
6	Systemic Transformation: Neoliberalism Meets the China Paradox	100
6.1	China, globalization, and the transition doctrines	100
6.2	The dynamics and conditions of transformational growth	103
6.3	The efficiency attributes of market-supplanting institutions	111
6.4	Dependence, inter-dependence, and dependent development	117
6.5	Summaries and conclusions	121
7	Transition: Market Fundamentalism, Evolutionism, and the Great Divide	123
7.1	Transformation of Soviet-type economies: Aspirations versus realities	123
7.2	Big Bang versus gradualism: Price liberalization and the market	127
7.3	Privatization, corporate control, and efficiency	132
7.4	Rethinking the Soviet-type system: The transition to/from socialism	137
7.5	Summaries and conclusions	140
8	The Economics of Feasible Socialism after Globalization	142
8.1	Socialist ideals and historical complexities	142
8.2	The classical visions: Distribution, production, and politics	145
8.3	The modern debates: Walrasian, Neo-Hobbesian, and Marxian theories	149
8.4	Feasible socialism: Markets, planning, and networks	152
8.5	Summaries and conclusions	161

9 Conclusions: World Development beyond Neoliberalism	163
9.1 Development lost in the lens of competing policy doctrines	163
9.2 China and alternatives to neoliberal globalization	165
Notes	169
Bibliography	180
Index	193