

MARKETING MANAGEMENT

A STRATEGIC DECISION-MAKING APPROACH

EIGHTH EDITION

JOHN W. MULLINS

Associate Professor of Management Practice in Marketing and Entrepreneurship
London Business School

ORVILLE C. WALKER, JR.

James D. Watkins Professor of Marketing, Emeritus
University of Minnesota

CONTENTS

PREFACE xvi

SECTION ONE

THE ROLE OF MARKETING IN DEVELOPING SUCCESSFUL BUSINESS STRATEGIES 1

- 1 The Marketing Management Process 2
 - Samsung—Building a Global Brand 2
 - New Competitive and Marketing Strategies 2
 - The Results 3
 - Marketing Challenges Addressed in Chapter 1 3
 - Why Are Marketing Decisions Important? 4
 - The Importance of the Top Line 5
 - Marketing Creates Value by Facilitating Exchange Relationships 5
 - What Factors Are Necessary for a Successful Exchange Relationship? 5
 - 1. Who Markets and Who Buys? The Parties in an Exchange 6
 - 2. Customer Needs and Wants 7
 - 3. What Gets Exchanged? Products and Services 10
 - 4. How Exchanges Create Value 10
 - 5. Defining a Market 12
 - What Does Effective Marketing Practice Look Like? 13
 - Marketing Management—A Definition 13
 - Integrating Marketing Plans with the Company's Strategies and Resources 15
 - Market Opportunity Analysis 16
 - Formulating Strategic Marketing Programs 17
 - Formulating Strategic Marketing Programs for Specific Situations 18
 - Implementation and Control of the Marketing Program 19
 - The Marketing Plan—A Blueprint for Action 19

- Who Does What? 21
 - Marketing Institutions 21
 - Who Pays the Cost of Marketing Activities—And Are They Worth It? 22
 - Room for Improvement in Marketing Efficiency 23
 - The Role of the Marketing Decision Maker 23
- Some Recent Developments Affecting Marketing Management 24
 - Globalization 24
 - Increased Importance of Service 25
 - Information Technology 25
 - Relationships across Functions and Firms 27
- Take-aways 27
- Endnotes 28
- 2 The Marketing Implications of Corporate and Business Strategies 30
 - IBM Switches Strategies 30
 - Technology Changes and Competitor Actions Require a Shift in Strategy 30
 - A New Corporate Strategy 31
 - New Business and Marketing Strategies 31
 - The Bottom Line 32
 - Marketing Challenges Addressed in Chapter 2 32
 - What Is Marketing's Role in Formulating and Implementing Strategies? 33
 - Market-Oriented Management 35
 - Does Being Market-Oriented Pay? 35
 - Factors That Mediate Marketing's Strategic Role 36
 - Three Levels of Strategy: Similar Components, but Different Issues 39
 - Strategy: A Definition 39
 - The Components of Strategy 39
 - The Hierarchy of Strategies 40
 - Corporate Strategy 40

Business-Level Strategy	42
Marketing Strategy	42
The Marketing Implications of Corporate Strategy Decisions	42
Corporate Scope—Defining the Firm's Mission	42
Corporate Objectives	47
Corporate Sources of Competitive Advantage	49
Corporate Growth Strategies	49
Allocating Corporate Resources	52
Limitations of the Growth-Share Matrix	54
Sources of Synergy	57
The Marketing Implications of Business-Unit Strategy Decisions	58
How Should Strategic Business Units Be Designed?	59
The Business Unit's Objectives	59
The Business Unit's Competitive Strategy	60
Take-aways	62
Endnotes	62

SECTION TWO

MARKET OPPORTUNITY ANALYSIS 67

3 Understanding Market Opportunities 68

The Cellular Telephone Business: Increasing Competition in a Growing Market	68
The Mobile Telephony Market	68
Cell Phone Manufacturing	68
Cell Phone Service Providers	69
Network Equipment Down, Too	69
Marketing Challenges Addressed in Chapter 3	70
Markets and Industries: What's the Difference?	70
Assessing Market and Industry Attractiveness	71
Macro Trend Analysis: A Framework for Assessing Market Attractiveness, Macro Level	72
The Demographic Environment	72
The Sociocultural Environment	75
The Economic Environment	76
The Regulatory Environment	77
The Technological Environment	78
The Natural Environment	79

Your Market Is Attractive: What about Your Industry?	80
Porter's Five Competitive Forces	80
A Five Forces Analysis of the Cellular Phone Service Industry	83
Challenges in Macro-Level Market and Industry Analysis	84
Information Sources for Macro-Level Analyses	85
Understanding Markets at the Micro Level	86
Understanding Industries at the Micro Level	88
The Team Domains: The Key to the Pursuit of Attractive Opportunities	89
Mission, Aspirations, and Risk Propensity	89
Ability to Execute on the Industry's Critical Success Factors	90
It's Who You Know, Not What You Know	90
Putting the Seven Domains to Work	91
Anticipating and Responding to Environmental Change	91
Impact and Timing of Event	92
Swimming Upstream or Downstream: An Important Strategic Choice	93
Take-aways	93
Endnotes	94

4 Understanding Consumer Buying Behavior 96

Cruise Ships—Not Just for Grandma and Grandpa Anymore	96
Savvy Marketing Helped Fuel Industry Growth	96
Future Challenges	97
Marketing Challenges Addressed in Chapter 4	98
The Psychological Importance of the Purchase Affects the Decision-Making Process	99
How Do Consumers Make High-Involvement Purchase Decisions?	99
Low-Involvement Purchase Decisions	107
Understanding the Target Consumer's Level of Involvement Enables Better Marketing Decisions	107

Why People Buy Different Things: Part 1—
The Marketing Implications of Psychological and Personal Influences 111

- Perception and Memory 111
- Needs and Attitudes 112
- Demographics, Personality, and Lifestyle 115

Why People Buy Different Things: Part 2—The Marketing Implications of Social Influences 117

- Culture 117
- Social Class 118
- Reference Groups 118
- The Family 119

Take-aways 120

Endnotes 120

5 Understanding Organizational Markets and Buying Behavior 122

DHL Supply Chain: Building Long-Term
Relationships with Organizational Buyers 122

- Building Long-Term Relationships with Customers 122
- Long-Term Relationships Enhance Long-Term
Performance 123

Marketing Challenges Addressed in Chapter 5 123

Who Is the Customer? 124

- A Comparison of Organizational versus
Consumer Markets 124
- What Do the Unique Characteristics of
Organizational Markets Imply for Marketing
Programs? 126
- The Organizational Customer Is Usually a Group
of Individuals 126

How Organizational Members Make Purchase
Decisions 129

- Types of Buying Situations 129
- The Purchase Decision-Making Process 130
- The Marketing Implications of Different
Organizational Purchasing Situations 136
- Purchasing Processes in Government
Markets 138

Selling Different Kinds of Goods and Services
to Organizations Requires Different Marketing
Programs 139

- Raw Materials 139
- Component Materials and Parts 141

- Installations 142
- Accessory Equipment 142
- Operating Supplies 143
- Business Services 143

Take-aways 144

Endnotes 144

6 Measuring Market Opportunities: Forecasting and Market Knowledge 146

Intel's Secret Weapon 146

- Bell's Charter at Intel 146
- How Do Anthropology and Ethnography
Work? 147
- What Is Bell Learning about Generation X? 147
- Can Bell's Work Make a Difference? 147

Marketing Challenges Addressed in Chapter 6 148

Every Forecast Is Wrong! 148

A Forecaster's Tool Kit: A Tool for Every
Forecasting Setting 149

- Statistical and Other Quantitative Methods 150
- Observation 151
- Surveys or Focus Groups 151
- Analogy 153
- Judgment 153
- Market Tests 154
- Psychological Biases in Forecasting 154
- Mathematics Entailed in Forecasting 154

Rate of Diffusion of Innovations: Another
Perspective on Forecasting 156

- The Adoption Process and Rate of Adoption 156
- Adopter Categories 157
- Implications of Diffusion of Innovation
Theory for Forecasting Sales of New Products and New Firms 157

Cautions and Caveats in Forecasting 159

- Keys to Good Forecasting 159
- Common Sources of Error in Forecasting 160

Why Data? Why Marketing Research? 160

Customer Relationship Management: Charting a Path toward Competitive Advantage 162

- Internal Records Systems 162
- Marketing Databases Make CRM Possible 163

Why CRM Efforts Fail	166	Choosing Attractive Market Segments: A Five-Step Process	189
Client Contact Systems	166	Step 1: Select Market-Attractiveness and Competitive-Position Factors	190
Competitive Intelligence Systems	167	Step 2: Weight Each Factor	193
Marketing Research: A Foundation for Marketing Decision Making	167	Step 3: Rate Segments on Each Factor, Plot Results on Matrices	193
Step 1: Identify the Managerial Problem and Establish Research Objectives	168	Step 4: Project Future Position for Each Segment	195
Step 2: Determine the Data Sources and Types of Data Required	169	Step 5: Choose Segments to Target, Allocate Resources	195
Step 3: Design the Research	171	Different Targeting Strategies Suit Different Opportunities	196
Step 4: Collect the Data	174	Niche-Market Strategy	197
Step 5: Analyze the Data	174	Mass-Market Strategy	197
Step 6: Report the Results to the Decision Maker	175	Growth-Market Strategy	198
What Users of Marketing Research Should Ask	175	Global Market Segmentation	198
Rudimentary Competence: Are We There Yet?	175	Take-aways	199
Take-aways	176	Endnotes	200
Endnotes	176	8 Differentiation and Brand Positioning	202
7 Targeting Attractive Market Segments	178	Fast Food Turns Healthy	202
The Developing World's Emerging Middle Class	178	The Jared Diet	202
The New Middle Class: Who and How Large?	178	Repositioning Fuels Subway's Growth	202
Targeting India's New Middle Class	179	Value: A Second Dimension to Subway's Positioning	203
Targeting: One Ingredient in Marketing Success	179	Marketing Challenges Addressed in Chapter 8	203
Marketing Challenges Addressed in Chapter 7	180	Differentiation: One Key to Customer Preference and Competitive Advantage	204
Do Market Segmentation and Target Marketing Make Sense in Today's Global Economy?	180	Differentiation among Competing Brands	205
Most Markets Are Heterogeneous	181	Physical Positioning	205
Today's Market Realities Often Make Segmentation Imperative	181	Limitations of Physical Positioning	206
How Are Market Segments Best Defined?	182	Perceptual Positioning	206
Who They Are: Segmenting Demographically	183	Leverage Marketers Can Use to Establish Brand Positioning	207
Where They Are: Segmenting Geographically	185	Preparing the Foundation for Marketing Strategies: The Brand Positioning Process	208
Geodemographic Segmentation	185	Step 1: Identify a Relevant Set of Competitive Products	209
How They Behave: Behavioral Segmentation	186	Step 2: Identify Determinant Attributes	210
Innovative Segmentation: A Key to Marketing Breakthroughs	189	Step 3: Collect Data about Customers' Perceptions for Brands in the Competitive Set	212

- Step 4: Analyze the Current Positions of Brands in the Competitive Set 212
- Step 5: Determine Customers' Most Preferred Combination of Attributes 216
- Step 6: Consider Fit of Possible Positions with Customer Needs and Segment Attractiveness 218
- Step 7: Write Positioning Statement or Value Proposition to Guide Development of Marketing Strategy 218

The Outcome of Effective Positioning: Building Brand Equity 221

Managing Brand Equity 222

Some Caveats in Positioning Decision-Making 223

Take-aways 224

Endnotes 224

SECTION THREE

DEVELOPING STRATEGIC MARKETING PROGRAMS 225

9 Business Strategies: A Foundation for Marketing Program Decisions 226

Business Strategies and Marketing Programs at 3M 226

Marketing Challenges Addressed in Chapter 9 228

How Do Businesses Compete? 229

Generic Business-Level Competitive Strategies 229

Do the Same Competitive Strategies Work for Single-Business Firms and Start-ups? 232

Do the Same Competitive Strategies Work for Service Businesses? 232

Do the Same Competitive Strategies Work for Global Competitors? 234

Will the Internet Change Everything? 234

How Do Competitive Strategies Differ from One Another? 235

Differences in Scope 235

Differences in Goals and Objectives 237

Differences in Resource Deployments 237

Differences in Sources of Synergy 238

Deciding When a Strategy Is Appropriate: The Fit between Business Strategies and the Environment 238

Appropriate Conditions for a Prospector Strategy 238

Appropriate Conditions for an Analyzer Strategy 240

Appropriate Conditions for a Defender Strategy 240

How Different Business Strategies Influence Marketing Decisions 242

Product Policies 243

Pricing Policies 245

Distribution Policies 245

Promotion Policies 245

What If the Best Marketing Program for a Product Does Not Fit the Business's Competitive Strategy? 246

Take-aways 248

Endnotes 248

10 Product Decisions 250

Product Decisions in a Services Business 250

Marketing Challenges Addressed in Chapter 10 251

Product Design Decisions for Competitive Advantage 252

Goods and Services: Are the Product Decisions the Same? 253

Product Quality and Features Decisions 253

Branding Decisions 255

Packaging Decisions 258

Services Decisions and Warranties 258

Managing Product Lines for Customer Appeal and Profit Performance 259

Product Systems 260

New Product Development Process Decisions 261

The Importance of New Products to Long-Term Profitability 261

New Product Success and Failure 261

Organizing for New Product Development 262

Key Decisions in the New Product Development Process 263

Limitations of Stage Gate Thinking and Processes 270

Product Decisions over the Product Life Cycle 271

Market and Competitive Implications of Product Life Cycle Stages 272

Strategic Implications of the Product Life Cycle 277	Designing Distribution Channels: What Kinds of Institutions Might Be Included? 315
Limitations of the Product Life Cycle Framework 278	Merchant Wholesalers 315
Take-aways 278	Agent Middlemen 315
Endnotes 278	Retailers 316
	Nonstore Retailing 317
11 Pricing Decisions 280	Channel Design Alternatives 318
Ryanair: Low Prices, High Profits—But Increasing Costs 280	Alternative Consumer Goods Channels 319
Marketing Challenges Addressed in Chapter 11 281	Alternative Industrial Goods Channels 320
A Process for Making Pricing Decisions 282	Which Alternative Is Best? It Depends on the Firm's Objectives and Resources 320
Strategic Pricing Objectives 283	Availability and the Satisfaction of Customer Service Requirements 321
Estimating Demand and Perceived Value 286	Promotional Effort, Market Information, and Postsale Service Objectives 323
Estimating Costs 289	Cost-Effectiveness 324
Analyzing Competitors' Costs and Prices 290	Flexibility 326
Methods Managers Use to Determine an Appropriate Price Level 291	Multichannel Distribution 326
Cost-Oriented Methods 291	Channel Design for Global Markets 327
Competition-Oriented Methods 293	Market Entry Strategies 327
Customer-Oriented Methods 295	Channel Alternatives 328
Deciding on a Price Structure: Adapting Prices to Market Variations 299	Channel Design for Services 330
Geographic Adjustments 299	Channel Management Decisions 331
Global Adjustments 300	Vertical Marketing Systems 331
Discounts and Allowances 301	Sources of Channel Power 334
Differential Pricing 303	Channel Control Strategies 334
Product-Line Pricing Adjustments 305	Trade Promotions—Incentives for Motivating Channel Members 335
Take-aways 306	Channel Conflicts and Resolution Strategies 338
Endnotes 306	Take-aways 339
	Endnotes 340
12 Distribution Channel Decisions 308	13 Integrated Promotion Decisions 342
Selling Soft Drinks in Africa—Coke Builds a Distribution System 308	Nano Goes Nowhere 342
Marketing Challenges Addressed in Chapter 12 309	Marketing Missteps 342
Why Do Multifirm Marketing Channels Exist? 310	Tata Responds 343
Designing Distribution Channels: What Are the Objectives to Be Accomplished? 311	Marketing Challenges Addressed in Chapter 13 343
Product Availability 311	The Promotion Mix: A Communication Tool Kit 344
Meeting Customers' Service Requirements 313	Developing an Integrated Marketing Communications Plan 345
Promotional Effort 314	Step 1: Define the Audience(s) to Be Targeted 345
Market Information 314	Step 2: Set the Promotional Objectives 346
Cost-Effectiveness 314	Step 3: Set the Promotion Budget 347
Flexibility 314

Step 4: Design the Promotion Mix	348
Step 5: Evaluate the Results	350
The Nitty-Gritty of Promotional Decision Making	351
Making Advertising Decisions	351
Making Personal Selling Decisions	362
Making Sales Promotion Decisions	367
Making Public Relations Decisions	368
... And All the Rest	369
Take-aways	370
Endnotes	370
SECTION FOUR
STRATEGIC MARKETING PROGRAMS FOR SELECTED SITUATIONS 373
14 Marketing Strategies for a Digitally Networked World	374
Opportunities in the App Economy	374
Games as Apps	374
More than Games	374
Business Models	375
Is It Real, or Is It a Bubble?	375
Marketing Challenges Addressed in Chapter 14	375
Does Every Company Need a Social Media Strategy?	376
Threats or Opportunities? The Inherent Advantages and Disadvantages of the Digital World for Marketers	378
The Syndication of Information	378
Increasing Returns to Scale of Network Products	379
The Ability to Efficiently Personalize and Customize Market Offerings	380
Disintermediation and Restructuring of Distribution Channels	380
Global Reach, 24/7 Access, and Instantaneous Delivery	382
Are These Digital World Attributes Opportunities or Threats?	382
First-Mover Advantage: Fact or Fiction?	384
Developing a Strategy for a Digitally Networked World	385
Marketing Applications for a Digitally Networked World	385

Developing Digital World Marketing Strategies: The Critical Questions	391
Managing Digitally Networked Strategies: The Talent Gap	395
Developing Strategies to Serve Digital World Markets	396
Serving the Dot-Com Markets of Tomorrow	397
Take-aways	398
Endnotes	398
15 Strategies for New and Growing Markets	400
Canon, Inc.—Success That Is Hard to Copy	400
Marketing Challenges Addressed in Chapter 15	401
How New Is New?	402
Market Entry Strategies: Is It Better to Be a Pioneer or a Follower?	404
Pioneer Strategy	404
Not All Pioneers Capitalize on Their Potential Advantages	406
Follower Strategy	407
Determinants of Success for Pioneers and Followers	408
Strategic Marketing Programs for Pioneers	410
Mass-Market Penetration	410
Niche Penetration	410
Skimming and Early Withdrawal	412
Marketing Program Components for a Mass-Market Penetration Strategy	412
Marketing Program Components for a Niche Penetration Strategy	415
Marketing Program Components for a Skimming Strategy	417
Growth-Market Strategies for Market Leaders	417
Marketing Objectives for Share Leaders	418
Marketing Actions and Strategies to Achieve Share-Maintenance Objectives	418
Fortress, or Position Defense, Strategy	420
Flanker Strategy	423
Confrontation Strategy	423
Market Expansion	424
Contraction or Strategic Withdrawal	425
Share-Growth Strategies for Followers	425
Marketing Objectives for Followers	425

Marketing Actions and Strategies to Achieve Share Growth 425
 Frontal Attack Strategy 426
 Leapfrog Strategy 430
 Flanking and Encirclement Strategies 430
 Supporting Evidence 431

Take-aways 432

Endnotes 433

16 Strategies for Mature and Declining Markets 436

Johnson Controls—Making Money in Mature Markets 436

Marketing Challenges Addressed in Chapter 16 437

Challenges in Mature Markets 438
 Challenges in Declining Markets 438

Strategic Choices in Mature Markets 438

Strategies for Maintaining Competitive Advantage 439

Methods of Differentiation 440
 Are the Dimensions the Same for Service Quality on the Internet? 443

Methods of Maintaining a Low-Cost Position 445

Customers' Satisfaction and Loyalty Are Crucial for Maximizing Their Lifetime Value 447

Marketing Strategies for Mature Markets 449

Strategies for Maintaining Current Market Share 449

Strategies for Extending Volume Growth 451

Strategies for Declining Markets 457

Relative Attractiveness of Declining Markets 457

Divestment or Liquidation 460

Marketing Strategies for Remaining Competitors 460

Take-aways 463

Endnotes 464

SECTION FIVE

IMPLEMENTING AND CONTROLLING MARKETING PROGRAMS 465

17 Organizing and Planning for Effective Implementation 466

Electrolux—Organizing to Rule the World of Household Appliances 466

Too Many Brands, Too Little Coordination 466
 A New Structure to Implement the New Strategy 467
 Preliminary Results 467

Marketing Challenges Addressed in Chapter 17 468

Designing Appropriate Administrative Relationships for the Implementation of Different Competitive Strategies 469

Business-Unit Autonomy 469
 Shared Programs and Facilities 471
 Evaluation and Reward Systems 472

Designing Appropriate Organizational Structures and Processes for Implementing Different Strategies 472

Functional Competencies and Resource Allocation 472
 Additional Considerations for Service Organizations 474
 Organizational Structures 475
 Recent Trends in Organizational Design 480
 Organizational Adjustments as Firms Grow and Markets Change 481
 Organizational Designs for Selling in Global Markets 482

Marketing Plans: The Foundation for Implementing Marketing Actions 483

The Situational Analysis 487
 Key Issues 488
 Objectives 489
 Marketing Strategy 489
 Action Plans 489
 Projected Profit-and-Loss Statement 490
 Contingency Plans 490

Take-aways 490

Endnotes 490

18 Measuring and Delivering Marketing Performance 492

Metrics Pay for Walmart 492

Changing Metrics for a Changing Strategy 493

Can Walmart's Overseas Stores Plug the Gap? 493

Marketing Challenges Addressed in Chapter 18 493

Designing Marketing Metrics Step by Step 495

Setting Standards of Performance 496

Specifying and Obtaining Feedback Data 501

Evaluating Feedback Data 501

Taking Corrective Action 502

Design Decisions for Strategic Monitoring Systems 503

Identifying Key Variables 503

Tracking and Monitoring 504

Strategy Reassessment 504

Design Decisions for Marketing Metrics 504

Who Needs What Information? 505

SEO and SEM Analysis 509

When and How Often Is the Information Needed? 510

In What Media and in What Format(s) or Levels of Aggregation Should the Information Be Provided? 511

Does Your System of Marketing Metrics Measure Up? 511

What Contingencies Should Be Planned For? 512

Global Marketing Monitoring 514

A Tool for Periodic Assessment of Marketing Performance: The Marketing Audit 515

Types of Audits 515

Measuring and Delivering Marketing Performance 516

Take-aways 518

Endnotes 518

INDEX 519