The Evolution of the Japanese Developmental State
Institutions locked in by ideas

Hironori Sasada
Contents

List of illustrations xi

1 Introduction 1
   I Introduction 1
   II Core institutions of the postwar Japanese economy 2
      1 Pilot agencies 3
      2 Industrial associations (Gyōkai dantai) 4
   III Alternative arguments 6
      1 The collective action theory 6
      2 A power-based rationalist theory 8
   IV Historical institutionalism 9
      1 Critical juncture 9
      2 Path dependency 10
      3 Ideas in politics 11
   V The evolution of the Japanese developmental state system and the legacy of a wartime idea – “tosei keizai ron” 13
   VI Points of contention 17
   VII Existing literature on the Japanese economy 18
   VIII Outline of the book 20

2 The early stages of Japan’s industrialization 22
   I Industrialization in the Meiji period (1868–1912) 23
   II Liberal market economy in the 1920s 25
   III Zaibatsu dominance and party politicians 29
   IV Conclusions 37

3 Institution-building in Manchuria (1932–45) 39
   I Historical background 40
   II Institutions of the Manchurian developmental state system 41
      1 Pilot agency: the Planning Bureau 41
      2 Special corporation (tokushu geisha) 45