Contents

List of Tables and Figures vii
Preface ix

1 How Will the Credit Crisis Transform the Fed? 1
   Crisis, Critical Junctures, and Policy Learning 1
   Origins of the Credit Crisis 4
   The Credit Market Meltdown 7
   What Options Did the Fed Have? 9
   Elements of Adaptation: Mission, Expertise, and Networks 12
   What Happens to the Fed Now? 19

2 Subprime Lending and the Mission of Consumer Protection 25
   The Subprime Mortgage Market and Federal Housing Goals 27
   The Fed and the Mortgage Market 30
   The Fed and Consumer Protection 32
   Regulation of Mortgage Lending After 2006 35
   Why Didn’t the Fed Do More? 36
   Consumer Protection After the Crisis 37

3 The Fed, Wall Street, and Housing Finance 41
   Housing Finance, Fannie Mae, and Freddie Mac 44
   Wall Street Joins the Party 46
   Why Would the Fed Encourage Private MBS? 49
   Problems in the Private MBS Market 52
   The Housing Finance Mission of the Contemporary Fed 56
   The Long-Term Challenge: Reforming Housing Finance 58
   Policy Change and Learning at the Fed 60
4 Bank Supervision and the Basel Accords 63
   Prudential Regulation, Basel, and the Politics of Capital Requirements 67
   Regulatory Arbitrage, Credit Default Swaps, and the Growth of the CDO Market 70
   Capital Requirements, Synthetic CDO, and "Super Senior" Risk 73
   Risk Assessment and Rating Agencies Under Basel II 75
   Basel II, Internal Models, and the Move to Self-Regulation 77
   Basel and Bank Supervision After the Crisis 82
   Risk Management and the Bright Light of Political Scrutiny 84

5 The Fed and the Shadow Banking System 87
   Credit Market Derivatives and the Problem of Systemic Risk 89
   Large Banks, Small Banks, and Bank Supervision at the Fed 94
   The Shadow Banking System and Prudential Regulation 97
   The Systemic Risk Mission and the Contemporary Fed 107

6 The $2 Trillion Balance Sheet 113
   The Fed’s Balance Sheet After 2007 116
   Fed Lending Programs: From AMLF to TSLF 118
   Too Big to Fail and the Problem of Moral Hazard 122
   Specialized Lending Facilities and Fed Independence 124
   The Expanding Balance Sheet and the Pursuit of Price Stability 127
   Crisis Termination and Policy Learning 129

7 Learning from the Crisis 131
   Interests: The Face of Power—Wall Street and Large Banks 132
   Mission: Making Sense of the Fed’s Role in the Economy 134
   Expertise: What Went Wrong? 137
   Warnings, Minority Views, and Learning from Diverse Perspectives 139
   Obstacles to Learning 141
   Public Scrutiny and Private Power 142

List of Acronyms and Abbreviations 149
Glossary of Key Financial Terms 153
References 157
Index 173
About the Book 181