Part I Brand Aesthetics: Theory and Direct Applications

1 Brand Aesthetics: An Oxymoron? \hspace{2cm} 11
  1.1 Introduction to the concept \hspace{2cm} 11
  1.2 The contribution of Jean-Marie Floch \hspace{2cm} 12

2 The Relevance of the Concept \hspace{2cm} 16
  2.1 The impact of the sensory world on consumer attitudes \hspace{2cm} 16
    2.1a Aesthetic dimensions of objects and services \hspace{2cm} 18
    2.1b Influence of the visual appearance of products and spaces on consumers \hspace{2cm} 20
    2.1c Aesthetic experience \hspace{2cm} 21
  2.2 The aesthetization of the everyday \hspace{2cm} 23
    2.2a Plastic differentiation \hspace{2cm} 23
    2.2b Convergence of art and brands \hspace{2cm} 26
    2.2c Dandyism \hspace{2cm} 30
  2.3 Managerial implications of the concept \hspace{2cm} 32
    2.3a Communication issues \hspace{2cm} 32
    2.3b Creation issues \hspace{2cm} 33
    2.3c Organizational issues \hspace{2cm} 33
    2.3d Cultural issues \hspace{2cm} 34
  2.4 Conclusions on the relevance of brand aesthetics \hspace{2cm} 35
    2.4a Postmodern consumption \hspace{2cm} 35
    2.4b Emergence of the postmodern brand \hspace{2cm} 36

3 Historical Foundations: From Experimental Aesthetics to Postmodernism \hspace{2cm} 37
  3.1 Experimental aesthetics \hspace{2cm} 37
    3.1a Fechner \hspace{2cm} 38
Contents

3.1b The heirs of Fechner 38
3.1c Berlyne 40
3.2 Business and aesthetics 41
  3.2a Product design 42
  3.2b Artificial intelligence and computer-aided design 43
  3.2c Brand aesthetics 44
3.3 Postmodernism and the aesthetics of consumption 44
3.4 Art history 45

4 Brand Identity 47
  4.1 The semiotic nature of brands 47
  4.2 The notion of invariance 48
    4.2a Dynamic coherence of identity 49
    4.2b The need for brand evolution 51
  4.3 Brand ethics and aesthetics: The EST-ET© diagram 53
  4.4 Communication chain and brand manifestations 55
    4.4a Communication chain 55
    4.4b Brand manifestations 56
    4.4c Four areas of brand aesthetics 60
  4.5 More-or-less explicit meaning 61
  4.6 Style 64
    4.6a The creative process 64
    4.6b Non-identification of aesthetic invariants 66
    4.6c Facts of style and facts of fashion 68
    4.6d Kunstwollen 68
  4.7 Figurative and plastic meanings 68
  4.8 Baroque and classical styles 72
    4.8a Independence from the historical period 74
    4.8b Full semiotics 74
  4.9 The 'baroquization' of daily life 78

5 The Chain of Brand Aesthetics 83
  5.1 Limitations of the semiotic approach 83
  5.2 The dialectics of brand identity 84
  5.3 The three ends of aesthetic treatments 84
    5.3a The decorative/ornamental end 85
    5.3b The functional end 86
    5.3c The representational end 86
  5.4 Diagram of the chain of brand aesthetics 90
  5.5 Methodology for an audit of brand communication 92
  5.6 Conclusions on brand aesthetics 94
Part II  Brand Aesthetics: Applications to Linear Aesthetic Expressions

6 Lines and Forms

6.1 Space, time, force, movement and expression
6.2 Concretization of lines
  6.2a Strokes
  6.2b Boundary between two areas
  6.2c Axis of an element
  6.2d Axis of composition
6.3 Linear expression and baroque style

7 The Relevance of Lines in Brand Aesthetic Management

7.1 Recent examples of relevant linear aesthetic treatment
  7.1a Citroën logo
  7.1b Gucci fragrances
  7.1c Caisse d'Epargne logo
  7.1d Zippo Blu lighter
7.2 Managerial implications
  7.2a Marketing optimization
  7.2b Adjustment of the brand identity
  7.2c Understanding trends
  7.2d Organizational benefits
7.3 A brief literature review
  7.3a Experimental studies of simple geometric shapes
  7.3b Computer-aided design (CAD)
  7.3c Semiotics
  7.3d Other literature

8 The Semiotic Square of Linearity

8.1 Four basic linear plastic elements
  8.1a Straight, angular and curved lines
  8.1b The sinuous line
  8.1c Mathematics of the four lines
  8.1d Degree of complexity
8.2 The SINC© square
  8.2a The semiotic square
  8.2b The square of linearity
  8.2c Relations of complementarity
  8.2d History of the tangent
9 Possible Meanings of the Four Lines 141
  9.1 Semantic considerations 142
    9.1a Straight 142
    9.1b Angular 143
    9.1c Sinuous 143
    9.1d Rounded 144
  9.2 From figurative to symbolic and plastic meanings 145
    9.2a The straight line 145
    9.2b The angular line 146
    9.2c The sinuous line 146
    9.2d The single-curved line 147
    9.2e Questions of conviction 147
    9.2f Triangle, square and circle 148
  9.3 Symbolic meanings 149
    9.3a The straight line 150
    9.3b The angular line 150
    9.3c The sinuous line 150
    9.3d The single-curved line 151
  9.4 Plastic meanings and more 151
    9.4a Riegl: Organic and crystalline styles 153
    9.4b Woringer: Empathy and abstraction 159
    9.4c Joly: The instinct of forms 161
    9.4d Arnheim: Lines and concepts 162
    9.4e Solomon: Attempt at a plastic grammar 166
10 Managerial Applications of the SINC© Square 168
  10.1 Summary of the meanings structured by the SINC© square 168
    10.1a Semantic nuclei 168
    10.1b Operating precautions 170
    10.1c Gradients of signification 170
  10.2 Examples of applications of the SINC© square 171
    10.2a Mercedes 171
    10.2b SAP 173
    10.2c Gehry's bench 175
  10.3 Analytical methodology of linear brand manifestations 178
    10.3a Meaningful linear differential gaps 179
    10.3b Forms of coherence 179
    10.3c Other applications of the SINC© square 181
