Essays on Classical and Marxian Political Economy
Collected Essays IV

Samuel Hollander
Contents

Preface

xviii

Acknowledgements

xxvii

PART I

Adam Smith

1. Adam Smith: market-failure pioneer and champion of “Natural Liberty” 3
2. John Rae and Adam Smith (1998) 42

PART II

The Classical Canon: Ricardo, Bailey, Say and Sraffa

4. The canonical classical growth model: content, adherence and priority (1998) 85
7. Ricardo as a “classical” economist; the “New View” re-examined: a reply to Dr Peach (2007) 161
8. The old “New View” reaffirmed: a truly final word? 166
xvi  Contents

10 Reply to Stirati's "Comment" on my "Sraffa and the interpretation of Ricardo: the Marxian dimension" (2011) 190

PART III
Malthus

12 Malthus and method: a study in irony (1999) 217
13 Malthus and the corn–profit model (2000) 230
14 "New avenues for research in Malthus studies": on Hashimoto and Pullen's "Two Unpublished Letters of Malthus" (2006) 249
15 An invited comment on 'Reappraisal of 'Malthus the Economist', 1933–97' by A.M.C. Waterman (1998) 253

PART IV
Marxian Political Economy

16 Engels–Marx versus Malthus on distribution and the population issue (2003) 261
17 On the Marxian entrepreneur: Karl Marx's abandonment of the doctrine of exploitation under industrial capitalism (2011) 278
18 On Karl Marx's doctrine of exploitation and replies to critics 293

PART V
Biographical Perspectives

19 John P. Henderson's Life and Economics of David Ricardo (2001) 307
20 Martin Bronfenbrenner as a comrade-in-arms in establishing the "New Classical Economics" (1999) 318
<table>
<thead>
<tr>
<th>Contents</th>
<th>xvii</th>
</tr>
</thead>
<tbody>
<tr>
<td>22</td>
<td>Afterword: a Memoir continued</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Notes</td>
<td>344</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>References</td>
<td>378</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Index</td>
<td>399</td>
</tr>
</tbody>
</table>