Contents

Foreword ix
Paul R. Sackett

About the Editors xiii

About the Contributors xv

Acknowledgements and Preface xxv
Duncan J. R. Jackson, Charles E. Lance, and Brian J. Hoffman

Part 1  A Context for Assessment Centers

1 What Are Assessment Centers and How Can They Enhance Organizations? 3
Nigel Povah and Lucy Povah

2 One History of the Assessment Center 25
Scott Highhouse and Kevin P. Nolan

3 Methods and Data Analysis for Assessment Centers 45
David J. Woehr, John P. Meriac, and Mark C. Bowler

4 Core Debates in Assessment Center Research: Dimensions Versus Exercises 68
Filip Lievens and Neil Christiansen

Part 2  Dimension-Based Assessment Centers

5 Dimension-Based Assessment Centers: Theoretical Perspectives 95
Winfred Arthur, Jr.

6 How to Apply a Dimension-Based Assessment Center 121
Paul C. W. Jansen
Part 3  Task-Based Assessment Centers

8  Task-Based Assessment Centers: Theoretical Perspectives  173
   Duncan J. R. Jackson

9  How to Design and Implement a Task-Based Assessment Center  190
   Carl, Thoresen and Joseph D. Thoresen

10 Research into Task-Based Assessment Centers  218
   Charles E. Lance

Part 4  Mixed-Model Assessment Centers

11 Dimensions AND Exercises: Theoretical Background of Mixed-Model Assessment Centers  237
   Klaus C. Melchers, Andreja Win, and Martin Kleinmann

12 How to Apply a Mixed-Model Assessment Center  255
   Jurgen Bank, Sarah Brock, Anuradha Ramesh, and Joy Hazucha

13 Exercises, Dimensions, and the Great Battle of Lilliput: Evidence for a Mixed Model Interpretation of AC Performance  281
   Brian J. Hoffman

Part 5  A Summary of Three Perspectives on Assessment Centers

14 Dimensions, Tasks, and Mixed Models: An Analysis of Three Diverse Perspectives on Assessment Centers  309
   Walter C. Borman

Index  321