Green Economics: Women's unequal pay and poverty

Edited by Miriam Kennet, Judith Felton, Michele Gale D' Oliveira and Amana Winchester

The Green Economics Institute (GEI)

2012
Contents

Part 1: Setting the scene for a gendered green economy

Section 1: Introduction – Green Economics, protest and renaissance in social and environmental justice and gender

Introduction: The costs of Women's Unequal Pay and Poverty
by Miriam Kennet and Michelle Gale de Oliveira

1.1 Women's Political and economic power today
by Amana Winchester

1.2 The ten key values of Green Economics
by Miriam Kennet, Jeff Turk and Michelle S. Gale de Oliveira

1.3 The shadow market: the powerhouse of the sovereign wealth funds and the new economic world order
By Miriam Kennet

1.4 Green Economics – A Global movement for change
By Miriam Kennet

1.5 Our pseudo-democratic servant-plutocracy: an exploration of our current political state, how we're governed in the interests of the super-rich, and how gender balance rules might overturn the status quo
By Natalie Bennett

1.6 A short History of Economic Autism
By Jane Skinner

Section 2: The costs to women and to the global economy of women's unequal pay and poverty

2.1 Women, old age and the future of our economies: the impact of existing economic ideology
by Sue England

2.2 Where are the women in the British national press?
By Natalie Bennett

2.3 Why it is important to change the current economic system
by Bente Teglgard Madeira

2.4 Sex and the Ivy League
By Graciela Chichilnisky
Part 2: Gendered geographies of a global green economy

Section 3: Gender and social justice in Brazil

3.1 Women and the global crisis: access to work and inequalities in Brazil
By Maria Alejandra Caporale Madi

Section 4: Gender and social justice in Europe: Green Economics – the economics of sharing and doing

4.1 The position of women in the Italian Economy of today
By Davide Bottos
4.2 Poverty of Polish Women
By Aleksandra Lukaszewicz
4.3 EU Fisheries Policy and Estonia
By Maret Merisaar

Section 5 Turkey as a rapidly developing CIVET country: women in the workplace

5.1 Gender Inequality and Education Gap in developing countries: Notes on Turkey
By Bengi Yanik-Ilhan and Nursel Aydiner-Avsar
5.2 Gender and women in the workplace in Turkey
By Seldag Ceylan

Section 6: Gender and social justice in Pakistan and Bangladesh

6.1 The women of the Khwendo Kor
By Maryam Bibi
6.2 Women in Bangladesh
By Soma Dey
6.3 Hearts of poverty and climate change
By Parvez Babul

Section 7: Gender costs: a case study of women's lives in the Indian Economy

7.1 Female Labour Participation in Rural and Urban India: Does Housewives' work count?
By Wendy Olsen and Smita Mehta
7.2 Application of Green Economics in Business in Rural India methods and tools
By Natalie West Kharkongor
7.3 Maternal health in India
By Katherine Kennet

Section 8: Gender costs, social and environmental justice: A case study of Africa
8.1 Towards the development of a Green Economics Model (GEM) that benefits Africa's people and natural environment
By Isayvani Naicker

8.2 Green economics working for elephants and people in the Sahel of Mali
Dr Susan Canney

Section 9: Gender and social justice — implementing a green economy in Australia
9.1 Creating Green Economies in Sub National Jurisdictions
By Meredith Hunter MLA

9.2 Analysing the Work contribution Determinants for Women in Australian Regional and Agricultural Communities
By Anusha Mahendran

Section 10: Gender and social and environmental costs in China
10.1 Unwavering Determination and a Shared Mission: Chinese Women Working for Social Equality and Justice
By Holly Zheng

10.2 Women in China: the view from inside
by Wei Ren

10.3 Superficiality of gender equality in Hong Kong
By Winston Ka-Ming Mak

10.4 Tackling Poverty and Climate change in China. Progress, survival or rapid economic growth?
By Sandra Ries
Green Economics – Women’s Unequal Pay and Poverty

Part 3: Implementing a global, green, gendered economy

Section 11: Introducing the features of a green economy

11.2 Post-feminism, motherhood and the welfare state
By Carolina López 271

11.3 Economic Man needs a Woman Too! Transforming Economic Structures for gender-equal and sustainable development
By Ewa Larsson 280

11.4 Global Change Innovative Green Economy thinking. Impact on the insurance industry
By Dr. oec Aija Graudina 283

11.5 Risk and Risk Insurance
By Dr. oec Aija Graudina 294

11.6 The methodological implications of research on women with special reference to Westwood (1994) and Lessenger (1996).
By Dr. Michael F. Taylor 300

Section 12: Practical steps to create a gendered global green economy

12.1 Good Governance in pensions and how this helps a Green agenda
By Christine Haswell 307

12.2 Finance and instability – refocusing the economic policy without growth
By Maria Alejandra Caporale Madi 311

12.3 Women’s Participation in Malaysia
By Norfaryanti Kamaruddin 318

12.4 Silent Voices: an emerging women power in Ethiopia
By Mahelet Alemayehu Mekonnen 323

12.5 ‘Greening’ a government training college curriculum: Critical reflections from UK experience
By Adrian Robertson & Charlotte Revelly 326

12.6 Activities of the Green Economics Institute in raising issues of equality in powerful forums around the world
By Miriam Kennet 334

12.7 Gender Blindness
By Deborah Ruggieri 349

12.8 Introduction to the era of women taking centre stage in economics by Miriam Kennet 353