Trade Unions in the Green Economy
Working for the environment

Edited by Nora Räthzel and David Uzzell
Contents

List of contributors ix
Acknowledgements xiv
Foreword xv

1. Mending the breach between labour and nature: a case for environmental labour studies 1
   DAVID UZZELL AND NORA RÄTHZEL

Trade union perspectives 13

2. Developing global environmental union policies through the International Trade Union Confederation 15
   ANABELLA ROSEMBERG

3. From sustainable development to a green and fair economy: making the environment a trade union issue 29
   LAURA MARTÍN MURILLO

4. The International Labour Organization and the environment: the way to a socially just transition for workers 41
   LENE OLSEN AND DORIT KEMTER

5. Food workers' rights as a path to a low carbon agriculture 58
   PETER ROSSMAN

6. Moving towards eco-unionism: reflecting the Spanish experience 64
   BEGOÑA MARÍA-TOMÉ GIL, TRANSLATED BY AGUSTÍN GONZÁLEZ

7. Cars, crisis, climate change and class struggle 78
   LARS HENRIKSSON
Contents

Analyses of trade union environmental policies across the globe 87

8 The neo-liberal global economy and nature: redefining the trade union role 89
JACKLYN COCK AND ROB LAMBERT

9 Questions for trade unions on land, livelihoods and jobs 101
ANDREW BENNIE

10 Climate change, trade unions and rural workers in labour–environmental alliances in the Amazon Rainforest 117
JOÃO PAULO CÂNDIA VEIGA AND SCOTT B. MARTIN

11 From ‘jobs versus environment’ to ‘green-collar jobs’: Australian trade unions and the climate change debate 131
VERITY BURGMANN

12 Just transition and labour environmentalism in Australia 146
DARRYN SNELL AND PETER FAIRBROTHER

13 Will they tie the knot? Labour and environmental trajectories in Taiwan and South Korea 162
HWA-JEN LIU

DIMITRIS STEVIS

15 US trade unions and the challenge of “extreme energy”: the case of the TransCanada Keystone XL pipeline 196
SEAN SWEENEY

16 From blue to green: a comparative study of blue-collar unions’ reactions to the climate change threat in the United States and Sweden 214
MEG GINGRICH

17 Trade unions and the transition away from ‘actually existing unsustainability’: from economic crisis to a new political economy beyond growth 227
JOHN BARRY

18 Local place and global space: solidarity across borders and the question of the environment 241
DAVID UZZELL AND NORA RÄTHZEL

Index 257
Contributors

John Barry is Reader in the School of Politics, International Studies and Philosophy and Associate Director of the Institute for a Sustainable World at Queen’s University, Belfast. He has written extensively about normative aspects of the politics and ethics of sustainability, citizenship and sustainability, and the political economy of sustainability and the politics of renewable energy. He is a Green Party councillor and former leader of the Green Party in Northern Ireland. His publications include Rethinking Green Politics: Nature, Virtue, Progress (Sage, 1999 – Winner of the PSA’s WJM Mackenzie Prize for best book published in political science) and Environment and Social Theory (Routledge, 2007). He co-edited The State and the Global Ecological Crisis (2005) and is co-editor of the journal Environmental Politics. He has just published The Politics of Actually Existing Unsustainability: Human Flourishing in a Climate Changed, Carbon Constrained World (2012).

Andrew Bennie completed his Master’s degree in Sociology at the University of the Witwatersrand, and the research from this has contributed substantially to his chapter. He now works in developing cooperatives and solidarity economy alternatives at the Cooperative and Policy Alternative Centre (COPAC), and is soon to begin work on his PhD.

Verity Burgmann is Professor of Political Science at the University of Melbourne. She is the author of numerous publications on labour movement history and politics, protest movements, radical ideologies and environmental politics. Her books include: 'In Our Time': Socialism and the Rise of Labor (1985); Power and Protest (1993); Revolutionary Industrial Unionism (1995); Green Bans, Red Union (1998); Unions and the Environment (2002); Power, Profit and Protest (2003); and Climate Politics and the Climate Movement in Australia (2012). Her current research interests are international labour movements’ opposition to globalisation, and utopianism and autonomist Marxism.

João Paulo Cândia Veiga is Professor of Political Science and International Relations at São Paulo University in Brazil. His research interests include