Manuel Stark

The Emergence of Developmental States from a New Institutionalist Perspective

A Comparative Analysis of East Asia and Central Asia

PETER LANG
Internationaler Verlag der Wissenschaften
Table of contents

LIST OF ABBREVIATIONS ........................................................................................................... XIII
LIST OF TABLES ........................................................................................................................ XV
LIST OF FIGURES ..................................................................................................................... XVII

1 Introduction ............................................................................................................................. 1
  1.1 Research scope ..................................................................................................................... 1
    1.1.1 Central Asia after 20 years of transition ....................................................................... 1
    1.1.2 The East Asian miracle and its relevance for Central Asia ......................................... 3
    1.1.3 Research questions and the relevant unit of analysis ..................................................... 8
  1.2 Theoretical Framework ........................................................................................................ 9
  1.3 Ontological and methodological considerations ................................................................. 10
  1.4 Outline of the study ............................................................................................................ 12

PART I: SETTING THE FRAMEWORK .................................................................................... 13

2 The state from the perspective of economic theory ................................................................. 15
  2.1 NPE and NIE as extensions of neoclassical economics .................................................... 15
  2.2 The Fundamentals of the NIE ............................................................................................ 19
    2.2.1 Objectives and Methodology ....................................................................................... 19
    2.2.2 Institutional change and its drivers ............................................................................. 23
  2.3 Institutions, the state, and the path of development ............................................................ 30
    2.3.1 Enforcement and interplay of institutions ..................................................................... 30
    2.3.2 Informal institutions, ideology, and discontinuous institutional change ...................... 33

3 East Asia and the developmental state in the literature: perspectives and disagreements ...... 39
  3.1 Methodology and research focus of the developmental state literature ............................ 39
  3.2 The key issues of the developmental state literature .......................................................... 41
    3.2.1 Economic policies in East Asia: the controversial role of the state .............................. 41
    3.2.2 Effective governance as a prerequisite for the developmental state ............................ 49
    3.2.3 Conditions for the emergence of a developmental state ............................................. 54
4 The developmental state and economic theory: implications, theoretical lineage, and the need for further research .......................................................... 63
  4.1 Varying models and definitions ....................................................... 63
  4.2 Toward a typology of states ............................................................ 66
  4.3 The theoretical lineage and implications of the developmental state argument ................................................ 70
  4.4 Conclusions and the need for further research .................................... 72

PART II: THE EAST ASIAN DEVELOPMENTAL STATES FROM THE PERSPECTIVE OF THE NIE ................................................................. 75

5 Institutions and policies of developmental states: a comparative analysis. 77
  5.1 Methodology and objectives of the case studies ................................ 77
  5.2 Japan as the archetype of the developmental state ............................... 80
    5.2.1 Phases of institutional development ........................................ 80
      5.2.1.1 From the onset of the Meiji Restoration to World War II .......... 80
      5.2.1.2 Institutional change during the war and occupation period ....... 91
      5.2.1.3 Institutional change during the post-war miracle .................. 95
    5.2.2 Conclusions from the institutional development of Japan ............... 100
  5.3 The industrialization of South Korea and Taiwan ............................. 104
    5.3.1 Phases of institutional development ........................................ 104
      5.3.1.1 The institutional heritage of Japanese colonialism .............. 104
      5.3.1.2 Institutional developments from the end of the Second World War up through the early 1960s ...................... 109
      5.3.1.3 The reorientation of economic policy in the 1960s .............. 116
      5.3.1.4 The maturing of the developmental state in South Korea and Taiwan ......................................................... 122
    5.3.2 Conclusions from the institutional development of South Korea and Taiwan ......................................................... 127
      5.3.2.1 Conclusions on the emergence of developmental states .......... 127
      5.3.2.2 Conclusions on the institutional environment of developmental states ..................................................... 133
  5.4 Singapore: a developmental city-state? ........................................... 135
    5.4.1 Reasons for the emergence of different economic development strategies in Singapore and Hong Kong ..................... 135
    5.4.2 The institutions of the developmental state in Singapore ................ 139
    5.4.3 Conclusions: Differences and similarities between Singapore and the Northeast Asian developmental states ...................... 143
5.5 Emerging economies in Southeast-Asia from the perspective of the developmental state concept ................................................................. 145
  5.5.1 The relevance of the emerging Southeast Asian economies ........ 145
  5.5.2 Economic policies and institutions of the emerging Southeast Asian economies ......................................................... 150
    5.5.2.1 Malaysia ........................................................................ 150
    5.5.2.2 Thailand ....................................................................... 156
    5.5.2.3 Indonesia ..................................................................... 160
  5.5.3 Conclusions from the institutional development of Malaysia, Thailand, and Indonesia ......................................................... 163

6  A new perspective on the developmental state .................................. 169
  6.1 The role of developmental states in the economy: balancing accumulation and allocation ......................................................... 169
  6.2 Transaction costs as the basis of the developmental state .......... 173
  6.3 The importance of reference economies ..................................... 178
  6.4 The evolution of developmental states and the importance of conflict 183
  6.5 Conclusions: the key elements of the developmental state .......... 187

PART III: CENTRAL ASIA FROM THE PERSPECTIVE OF THE DEVELOPMENTAL STATE CONCEPT ............................................................... 191

7  Economic transition in Central Asia: A short overview ................. 193
  7.1 The Russian and Soviet legacy in Central Asia .......................... 193
    7.1.1 The advent of Russian colonialism .................................... 193
    7.1.2 Central Asia as part of the Soviet Union ......................... 195
  7.2 The development of the five Central Asian republics after independence ............................................................................................. 197
    7.2.1 The initial conditions of the Central Asian republics and their economic performance after independence ................. 197
    7.2.2 The economic performance of the Central Asian republics since 2000 ................................................................................. 206
  7.3 Diverging transition strategies of Kazakhstan and Uzbekistan: the importance of constraints and ideologies ......................... 213
    7.3.1 Kazakhstan’s path from rapid reformer to state-led capitalism ............ 213
      7.3.1.1 Political conditions .................................................... 213
      7.3.1.2 Government-business relations ................................ 215
      7.3.1.3 The public administration ........................................ 219
7.3.2 Uzbekistan: gradualism or stagnation? .............................................. 223
7.3.2.1 Political conditions ................................................................. 223
7.3.2.2 Government-business relations ............................................... 228
7.3.2.3 The public administration ....................................................... 232

7.4 Conclusions: the Central Asian countries in comparative perspective. 235

8 Empirical study: insights on political and economic reform experiences in Central Asia .............................................................. 239
8.1 Objectives and design of the empirical study ................................ 239
8.2 Methodology for the analysis of interviews ................................... 243
8.3 Results of the analysis ................................................................. 247
8.3.1 Kazakhstan ................................................................................. 247
  8.3.1.1 The role of the state in the economy: economic policies and objectives ................................................................. 247
  8.3.1.2 Functioning of the state-business nexus ................................ 252
  8.3.1.3 Institutions of the public administration .............................. 258
8.3.2 Uzbekistan ................................................................................. 264
  8.3.2.1 The role of the state in the economy: economic policies and objectives ................................................................. 264
  8.3.2.2 Functioning of the state-business nexus ................................ 269
  8.3.2.3 Institutions of the public administration .............................. 278

9 Implications from the empirical study: a discussion ......................... 285
9.1 Kazakhstan and Uzbekistan: developmental, predatory, or intermediate states? .................................................. 285
9.2 Theoretical considerations on the prospects for the emergence of developmental states in Central Asia .................. 293

10 Conclusions: Findings and limitations of the study ........................ 297

REFERENCES .................................................................................. 301

Appendix A: Code system research project Emerging Market Economies .... 325
Appendix B: Information on interviewees from focus groups (a) and (b) .... 327