Popular Representations of Development

Insights from novels, films, television and social media

Edited by David Lewis,
Dennis Rodgers and
Michael Woolcock
Contents

List of figures and tables  x
List of contributors     xii
Acknowledgements        xv

PART I
Introduction          1

1 Introduction: popular representations of development  3
DAVID LEWIS, DENNIS RODGERS AND MICHAEL WOOLCOCK

PART II
Literature and fiction  17

2 The fiction of development: literary representation as a source of authoritative knowledge  19
DAVID LEWIS, DENNIS RODGERS AND MICHAEL WOOLCOCK

3 Notes on teaching international studies with novels: Hard Times, Half of a Yellow Sun and The Quiet American  38
JOHN HARRISS

4 Considering ‘pedagogical’ fictions and metanarratives of development: 1 World Manga  53
VERONICA DAVIDOV
Contents

Part III
Media and television 71

5 More news is bad news: why studies of ‘the public faces of development’ and ‘media and morality’ should be concerned with reality TV programmes 73
MARTIN SCOTT

6 “Hidden in plain sight”: Baltimore, The Wire and the politics of under-development in urban America 92
SIMON PARKER

Part IV
Film 111

7 The projection of development: cinematic representation as an(other) source of authoritative knowledge? 113
DAVID LEWIS, DENNIS RODGERS AND MICHAEL WOOLCOCK

8 Affective histories: imagining poverty in popular Indian cinema 131
ESHA SHAH

Part V
Public campaigns 149

9 Visual representations of development: the Empire Marketing Board poster campaign, 1926–1933 151
UMA KOTHARI

10 Band Aid reconsidered: sentimental cultures and populist humanitarianism 174
CHERYL LOUSLEY

Part VI
New media 193

11 Blogs + Twitter = Change? Discursive reproduction of global governance and the limits of social media 195
TOBIAS DENSkus AND DANIEL E. ESSER
FollowMe.IntDev.Com: international development in the blogosphere
RYANN MANNING

Part VII
Conclusion

Conclusion: popular representations of development – taking stock, moving forward
DAVID LEWIS, DENNIS RODGERS AND MICHAEL WOOLCOCK

Index