Chinese Economists on Economic Reform – Collected Works of Chen Xiwen

Chen Xiwen

Edited by China Development Research Foundation
Contents

Series preface xi
About the author xii
Author's preface xiv

1 The rise of township-and-village enterprises and changes in national economic patterns 1 (1985)

2 The key to economic development in rural areas is the correct treatment of farmers 12 (1990)

3 New problems facing rural reform and development in the 1990s 58 (1992)

4 Bringing about a gradual modernization of agriculture through management that is based on the household-contracting system 71 (1998)

5 A recommendation to suspend taxes on agriculture for one year, specifically the agricultural tax, the tax on special agricultural products, the tax on pig slaughtering, and the rural levies for education 75 (1999)

6 Recommendations on improving our reform of the grain 'circulation' system 79 (April 1999)
Contents

7 The turning point in our supply and demand situation for grain, and regulating the structure of agricultural production (2000) 87

8 Agriculture, the rural economy, and farmers: Issues for the next stage (2001) 98

9 Promoting the building up of a ‘new socialist countryside’ (2005) 118

10 The current situation with respect to agriculture, rural areas, and farmers in our country (2006) 127

11 Several issues that deserve attention with respect to our current rural land policies (August 2006) 135

12 Recommendations with respect to setting up more universal coverage of the minimum living allowance system in rural areas (November 28, 2006) 148

13 Coordinate socioeconomic development in urban and rural areas and set up enduring mechanisms that enable industry to propel the advance of agriculture and that enable urban areas to ‘bring along’ rural areas: Finding proactive ways to build up a new socialist countryside (2007) 151

14 Several noteworthy issues with respect to the recent increases in agricultural prices (June 2007) 177

15 On the current socioeconomic situation with respect to agriculture and to rural areas, and major policy considerations (September 6, 2007) 183

16 Modernize agriculture in a way that accommodates China’s specific situation (October 2007) 208

Major works by Chen Xiwen 223
Index 225