Managing the Transition to a Sustainable Enterprise
Lessons from frontrunner companies

Rob van Tulder
Rob van Tilburg
Mara Francken
Andrea da Rosa
PART I
Setting the stage

1 Introduction: the logic of sustainable enterprise

1.1 Introduction 3
   1.1.1 Target group 7
   1.1.2 Study group: using actual experience 8
   1.1.3 Delineation and approach 11
   1.1.4 Stakeholders 11

1.2 Approach 11
   1.2.1 Overcoming obstacles 13
   1.2.2 Four phases on the way to sustainable development 13

1.3 The structure of this book 14

2 Delineating sustainable enterprise 18

2.1 Defining sustainable enterprise: what are we talking about? 19

2.2 Commitment and a sense of urgency 20

2.3 Significance for companies 23
   2.3.1 Increasing awareness of dependence on natural resources and ecosystems 23
   2.3.2 The split between slow legislation and fast opinion mobilisation 24
   2.3.3 Liabilities 24
   2.3.4 Growing scale and influence of companies 25
   2.3.5 Higher standards of living allow for higher moral standards 26
   2.3.6 More transparent society 26
   2.3.7 Company value 27
4.4 Phase transitions and tipping points 91
4.4.1 Internal drivers and barriers to change 92
4.4.2 External drivers and barriers to change 98

4.5 Main transition challenges 100
4.5.1 Activation: from inactive to reactive 100
4.5.2 Internal alignment: from reactive to active 100
4.5.3 External alignment: from active to proactive 101

4.6 Conclusion: from temporary to permanent change 101
4.6.1 Model summary 102

5 Collaborative sustainable enterprise: the increasing importance of stakeholders 108
5.1 Introduction: two schools of thought 108
5.2 Categories of stakeholder 110
5.2.1 Internal stakeholders 113
5.3 Reasons to do business with engaged stakeholders 113
5.4 Setting priorities 114
5.5 Forms and methods of dialogue 117
5.5.1 One-to-one contacts 118
5.5.2 Multi-stakeholder meetings and surveys 118
5.5.3 Conferences 119
5.5.4 Roundtable discussions 120
5.5.5 Partnerships 120
5.6 An increasingly complex playing field 121
5.7 Conclusion: timing and coordination 125

PART III
Practices 131

6 Departing the inactive phase 133
6.1 The status quo 135
6.1.1 Development attitude 135
6.1.2 Preparing to depart from the inactive phase 136
6.1.3 The social dimension 139
6.2 Towards a reactive attitude: the wake-up call 140
6.2.1 Internal strategic change 141
6.2.2 External pressure and crisis 141
6.2.3 Sudden or gradual change 141
6.2.4 Sudden change 142
6.2.5 Gradual change 155
6.3 Out of the inactive phase: conditions and interventions 169
6.3.1 For directors 169
6.3.2 For directors and managers 169
7 From reactive towards active

7.1 Action and reaction 173
7.2 Growth through the reactive phase 174
  7.2.1 Introduction of a CSR department 175
  7.2.2 From KPIs to reporting 176
  7.2.3 Internal financial interventions 180
  7.2.4 Building employee engagement 181
  7.2.5 The beginnings of supply chain management 182
  7.2.6 The importance of recognition 184
  7.2.7 Follow-through growth in sight 185
7.3 Leaving the reactive phase behind 188
  7.3.1 Case study: FrieslandCampina 188
  7.3.2 Case study: Philips 192
  7.3.3 Case study: National railway operator (NS) 195
7.4 Summary conditions and interventions towards the active phase 197
  7.4.1 For directors 199
  7.4.2 For CSR managers 199

8 Moving towards the proactive phase

8.1 Moving through the active phase 202
  8.1.1 Case study: Bavaria and Albron – ISO 26000 and the CSR performance ladder 204
  8.1.2 Role of strategic slogan and sustainability in the mission 207
  8.1.3 Innovations and earnings models 208
  8.1.4 Combined chain initiatives 210
  8.1.5 Case study: HEMA – chain collaboration 211
  8.1.6 Ready for a proactive attitude 211
8.2 Growth to the proactive phase 213
  8.2.1 Case study: Siemens – strategic portfolio management 215
  8.2.2 Case study: Rabobank – opinion forming on national and global problems 217
  8.2.3 Case study: Unilever 219
8.3 Summary of conditions and interventions for growth to the proactive phase 223
  8.3.1 For directors 224
  8.3.2 For CSR managers 224

PART IV
The future

9 Back to the future

9.1 The power of awareness 230
9.2 Crisis as impetus for new meaning and sense-making 233
9.3 Individual initiatives 234
  9.3.1 Portfolio thinking 234
  9.3.2 Business models 235
  9.3.3 Supply chain management 235
  9.3.4 Transparency and collaboration 236
  9.3.5 Choose! 237
  9.3.6 Governance: the role of the supervisory board 237
  9.3.7 Stakeholders 237

9.4 Collective tasks 238
  9.4.1 Incorporation of externalised environmental and social costs 238
  9.4.2 Circular economy 238
  9.4.3 Local for local 239
  9.4.4 Towards shareholder involvement 239
  9.4.5 Perspective 240

Epilogue – a word of thanks 242

Appendix 1: Golden tips 244

Appendix 2: Partners in dialogue for the companies studied 246

Bibliography 248
Index 254