Coordinating Urban and Rural Development in China
Learning from Chengdu

YE Yumin
Dean and Professor, Department of Urban Planning and Management, Renmin University of China

Richard LeGates
Emeritus Professor, Department of Urban Studies and Planning, San Francisco State University, USA

Edward Elgar
Cheltenham, UK • Northampton, MA, USA
Contents

Preface  vi
Acknowledgements  x

1 Urban–rural development in an urbanizing world  1
2 China’s urban–rural relationships and national modernization  38
3 The Chengdu model of coordinated urban–rural development: framework and strategy  69
4 Governance and public administration reform  94
5 Urban and rural planning and development in Chengdu  123
6 Equalizing public services  148
7 Grassroots democracy: the foundation of rural modernization  179
8 Functional zones and economic growth  203
9 Restructuring land, labor, and capital markets  239
10 Chengdu experience’s value for China and the challenges for its wider application  287
11 What the world can learn from Chengdu  311
12 Conclusion  345

Appendix:  Concepts and terms related to coordinated urban–rural development  356
References  371
Index  391