MULTINATIONAL FIRMS IN CHINA
Entry Strategies, Competition, and Firm Performance

SEA-JIN CHANG

OXFORD UNIVERSITY PRESS
CONTENTS

1. Introduction 1
   Government Policies toward Foreign Multinationals 3
   Trends of Foreign Direct Investment 11
   Organizing Framework 22

2. Foreign Entry Strategies 32
   The Automobile Industry: A Case Study 32
   Entry Mode and Location Choices 40
   Post-Entry Strategies 56

3. Emergence of Local Competitors 65
   The Consumer Products Industry: A Case Study 65
   The Restructuring Process 72
   Privatization and Firm Performance 78
   Productive New Entrants 81
   Spillover from Foreign Multinationals to Local Firms 85

4. Competition Between and Among Foreign and Local Firms 89
   The Telecom Industry: A Case Study 89
   Industry Competitive Dynamics 97
   Intellectual Property Rights in China 104
   Emerging Winners from the Competition 108

5. Performance of Foreign Firms 114
   The Beer Industry: A Case Study 114
   Spillover, Competition, and Firm Survival 125
   Profitability of Foreign Firms and Income Shifting 131

6. Competing for the Future 138
   The Steel Industry: A Case Study 138
   Reducing State Control and Further Privatization 144
   Competition and Further Consolidation 147
   Wage Increase and Further Upgrading 156
   Chinese Firms’ Outward FDI and Further Globalization of Competition 159
Appendices

1. Annual Industrial Survey and Definition of Firm Ownership Types 167
2. Entry Mode Decision 171
3. Location Decision 176
4. Performance Implications of Conversion of Joint Ventures to Wholly Owned Subsidiaries 180
5. Privatization and Firm Performance 189
6. Calculating Productivity 196
7. Determinants of Foreign Firms' Market Share 200
8. Survival Analysis of Foreign and Local Firms 204
9. Profitability Analysis of Foreign and Local Firms 212
10. Income Shifting Practices in China 215

Notes 223
References 233