AMERICAN BIG BUSINESS
IN BRITAIN AND GERMANY

A Comparative History of Two
"Special Relationships" in the 20th Century

VOLKER R. BERGHAHN

PRINCETON UNIVERSITY PRESS
PRINCETON AND OXFORD
CONTENTS

Introduction

1. A Long Book in a Nutshell  1
2. Conceptualizing “Americanization” and the “American Century”  2
3. The Anglo-American “Special Relationship”  5
4. The German-American “Special Relationship”  8
5. Sources  11
6. Transatlantic History and Its Global Dimensions  12
7. The Trials and Tribulations of Venturing into a Foreign Economy  14

I  The North Atlantic Business Triangle and the Constellation of 1900–1901

1. International Relations Around 1900  22
2. Assessing the Old and the New Century  23
3. Political and Economic Relations in the Age of Late-Nineteenth-Century Imperialism  27
4. Frank Vanderlip’s and William Stead’s Views of Anglo-American Relations  30
5. American Perceptions of the Wilhelmine Industrial System  37
6. Trying to Understand the Peculiarities of the German Political System  45
7. The Cultural Difficulties of Operating in Foreign Markets  49

II  Cooperation, Peaceful Competition, and the Specter of War, 1902–1914

1. Introduction  57
2. American Foreign Direct Investments in Britain and Germany  58
3. Facing British and German Competition and Cooperation  63
4. Prince Heinrich’s Mission and German-American Relations in the New Century  70
5. American Big Business in Britain and Germany at Mid-Decade  73
6. The Threat of Deteriorating Political Relations  75
7. Comparing the Peculiarities of the American and German Industrial Systems  79
8. American Big Business and the Question of Political Participation  84
9. American and European Businessmen and the Specter of a Major War  88
Contents

III From the Outbreak of War in July 1914 to the Genoa Conference, 1922

1. The Military-Political Origins of World War I  105
2. The International Business Community and the Outbreak of War in 1914  108
3. The Ambiguities of American Neutrality  113
4. The American Economy and the Moves to Enter the War  116
5. The American Entry into the War and the Dilemmas of Peacemaking  123
6. American Big Business and European Reconstruction  126
7. The Idea of an International Loan for European Reconstruction and Its Failure  131
8. The State of the American, British, and French Economies in the Early 1920s  134
9. American Big Business and the Postwar Crisis in Germany  137
10. American Big Business, Washington, and the Question of European Loans  139
11. The Origins of the Washington System in the Far East  142
12. Britain's Rival Attempt to Spearhead a European Recovery Plan  144

1. Introduction  160
2. German Reparations and the Harding Administration  161
3. American Big Business and the Crisis of 1923  165
4. Political Stabilization through the Locarno Pact  168
5. The American Business Community and the Dawes Plan  170
6. American Big Business and the British Economy  179
7. American Investments in Weimar Germany and Their Risks  187
8. The Problem of International Cartels, Trusts, and Cooperations  195
9. The Instabilities of Weimar Politics and American Business Optimism  201
10. Parker Gilbert's Pessimism and American Business Gullibility  206
11. America's Domestic Boom and the "Wild" Years of 1925–1929  211
12. The Great Slump and Its Consequences in International Politics  214

V Nazi Germany, Appeasement, and Anglo-American Big Business, 1933–1941

1. Introduction  227
2. Hitler's Ideology of Conquest and Ultimate War Aims  229
3. Hitler's Foreign Policy in the 1930s  232
4. The Underestimation of Hitler and British Appeasement  236
5. American Foreign Policy in the 1930s  239
6. American Big Business and the Roosevelt Administration  243
7. Stimulating American Industrial Production  245
Contents

8. American Views of the Hitler Dictatorship  250
9. Hitler and German Industry  255
10. Doing Business in Nazi Germany  257
11. The U.S. Auto Industry and Mass Motorization  260
12. British and American Business and the Preservation of Peace  266
13. IBM in Germany  272

VI  British and German Business and Politics under the Pax Americana, 1941–1957
1. Hitler's Quest for Victory in the East  286
2. Planning for Victory and Henry Luce's "American Century"  288
3. Cartels and the "German Question"  293
4. The Role of American Big Business in Postwar Planning  299
5. The Start of the Cold War and Anglo-American Relations in Occupied Germany  301
6. The Politics of Decartelization  307
7. The Response of West German Industry to America's Recasting Efforts  313
8. Britain and the Difficulties of Economic Reconstruction  317
9. The Origins of the European Coal and Steel Community  323
10. American Big Business and Otto A. Friedrich  326
11. Modernizing Phoenix A.G. and Erhard's Anti-Cartel Bill  329
12. The Reluctant Modernization of British Industry  332
13. America and the Suez Crisis  339

Conclusions 355

Acknowledgments 365

Index 367