Contents

List of figures xi
List of tables xii
Notes on contributors xiii
Acknowledgements xvii

Introduction 1
1 Background 1
2 Content 2

PART I
Fundamental theories 7

1 Regulatory reform after the financial crisis: Twin Peaks revisited 9
MICHAEL W. TAYLOR
1.1 Introduction 9
1.2 (Why) does institutional structure matter? 11
1.3 The case for Twin Peaks 14
1.4 The Twin Peaks structure 18
1.5 Four lessons from the financial crisis 20
1.6 Conclusion 27

2 Financial stability and proper business conduct: can supervisory structure help to achieve these objectives? 29
DIRK SCHOENMAKER AND JEROEN KREMERS
2.1 Introduction 29
2.2 Supervisory objectives and structure 30
2.3 Conduct of business: a focused approach 35
2.4 Financial stability: strong role for central bank 36
Contents

2.5 Emerging Twin Peaks structure in Europe 37
2.6 Conclusion 37

3 Rules, discretion and macro-prudential policy
ITAI AGUR AND SUNIL SHARMA
3.1 Introduction 40
3.2 Rules-based macro-prudential regulation is difficult 41
3.3 Discretion opens the door to resistance 47
3.4 A strong baseline: reducing the burden on time-varying policy 57
3.5 Conclusion 60

4 Helping hand or grabbing hand? Supervisory architecture, financial structure and market view
DONATO MASCIANDARO AND MARC QUINTYN
4.1 Introduction 66
4.2 Do markets matter in designing financial supervision architectures? Helping hand view versus grabbing hand view 69
4.3 Does the market factor matter? 73
4.4 Case study: the market view in Italy 79
4.5 Conclusion 88

PART II
International experiences

5 Implementing Twin Peaks: lessons from Australia
JEFF CARMICHAEL
5.1 Introduction 103
5.2 Background to Australia’s Twin Peaks model 103
5.3 Managing the transition 105
5.4 Harmonizing the approach to regulation 107
5.5 Defining the regulatory boundaries 107
5.6 Inter-agency coordination 108
5.7 Conclusion 108

6 The break-up of the Financial Services Authority in the UK
EILIS FERRAN
6.1 Introduction 109
6.2 Did the FSA have to go? An examination of the case for abolition 113
6.3 Why it matters that the case for abolition of the FSA cannot be convincingly established 123
6.4 Summary 136

7 One step forward, two steps back? The institutional structure of US financial services regulation after the crisis of 2008
SÄULE T. OMAROVA

7.1 Introduction 137
7.2 A product of history: an overview of the US financial regulatory structure before 2010 138
7.3 What is to be done? Themes in the debate on reforming the US financial regulatory structure 141
7.4 The Dodd–Frank Act of 2010: key changes in the US financial regulatory structure 150
7.5 What to expect? Uncertain prospects and certain challenges 162
7.6 Conclusion 164

8 Evolving supervisory and regulatory approaches of Japan in the post-crisis era
MAMIKO YOKOI-ARAI AND TETSUO MORISHITA

8.1 Introduction 166
8.2 The genesis of the institutional structure of financial supervision 168
8.3 Evolving supervisory approaches 177
8.4 Conclusion 186

9 Financial regulatory structure in Hong Kong: looking forward
DOUGLAS W. ARNER AND EVAN GIBSON

9.1 Introduction 190
9.2 Historical financial development 191
9.3 Regulatory structural themes 197
9.4 Financial regulatory structure 200
9.5 Global Financial Crisis: Hong Kong 210
9.6 International organizations 213
9.7 G20/FSB financial regulatory reforms 213
9.8 Financial regulatory structure: options 224
9.9 Conclusion 226
10 Institutional structure of financial regulation in China: where is it now and where is it heading? 232

ROBIN HUI HUANG

10.1 Introduction 232
10.2 The current financial regulatory structure 232
10.3 Characteristics and problems 243
10.4 The future of China's financial regulatory framework 251
10.5 Conclusion 258

Index 259