Coordination in Transition

The Netherlands and the World Economy, 1950–2010

By

Jeroen Touwen
Contents

Acknowledgments VII
List of Tables and Figures VIII
List of Abbreviations XII

1 Introduction: A Tension between Coordination and Competition? 1
   Coordination in the Netherlands 1
   Traditions of Approaching Institutions 10
   Capitalisms Compared 17

2 Growth and Structural Change in the Netherlands and Other OECD Economies 33
   Have 50 Years of Structural Change Lessened the Degree of Coordination? 33
   Economic Growth in the Netherlands after World War II 35
   The 'Convergence Club' of Dissimilar OECD Economies 44
   Alternative Indicators of Economic Development 52
   Structural Economic Change and Technological Change 62
   Effects of Technological Change on the Typology of 'Varieties of Capitalism' 78
   Conclusion: More Market, not Less Coordination 86

3 At Ease with the Market: Coordination in the Dutch Business System 88
   Characteristics of the Dutch Business System 88
   Business Systems, Culture, Family Firms 89
   The Composition of the Private Sector 100
   Cooperation among Firms 104
   Interlocking Directorates and Other Aspects of Corporate Governance 116
   Eager Globalizer: The Openness of the Dutch Economy 123
   Conclusion: Worldwide Developments and Local Adjustments 135

4 Corporatism and Pragmatism: Coordination in Labor Relations 142
   Where Did Dutch Coordination Come from and Where Will It Go? 142
   Specific Aspects of Coordination in Labor Relations 143
   The Evolution of the Dutch Consultative System 148
   From Postwar Consensus to Polarization 166
   Institutional Change after the Wassenaar Agreement of 1982 172
The Central Position of the SER and the Failure of the Green Polder Model 184
Labor in a Changing World: The Netherlands in a European Context 190
Conclusion: A Pragmatist Tradition of Consultation 201

5 Coordination and Trust: The Dutch Welfare State 205
Coordination and the Welfare State 205
The Peculiar Path of the Dutch Welfare State 209
Monitoring the Levels of Social Spending 227
Effects of Coordination on the Development of the Dutch Welfare State 240
Conclusion: Coordinated Interest in Social Protection 248

6 Economic Policy: In Search of Shared Economic Responsibility 250
Reconciling Different Agendas 250
Economic and Social Goals of Dutch Postwar Policy 255
Changing Policy Priorities During the 1980s and 1990s 262
Towards a New Type of Capitalism: Privatization, Liberalization, and Reregulation 276
Effects of Coordination on Government Policy 291
Conclusion: Coordinated Neoliberal Capitalism 312

7 Changing Context, Changing Framework 316
General Conclusions on Coordination 316
Non-market Coordination in the Netherlands 323
Towards the Future 337

Bibliography 343
Index 369