Working Time
Trends and Prospects in the New Economy

edited by
Helena Strzemińska and Marek Bednarski

Warsaw 2014
CONTENTS

PUBLISHER’S NOTE ....................................................................................................................... 7

INTRODUCTION: THE FACTOR OF TIME IN THE NEW ECONOMY. WHERE ARE WE HEADING? AN OVERVIEW (Helena Strzeminska) ....... 10

Chapter I
HOW DO WE WORK? WHAT WILL CHANGE IN THE FUTURE? TENDENCIES IN EUROPE AND IN THE WORLD ........................................... 17
Steffen Lehndorff
Working Time Trends and Prospects in Europe ........................................................................ 19
Karl-Friedrich Ackermann
The Future of Working Time Management (WTM) in Global Competition: A Microeconomic Perspective ......................................................... 35
Ania Zbyszewska
Visions for the Future: Imagining and Anticipating Tomorrow’s Work Hours from the North American Perspective .................................................. 58
Marek Bednarski, Dorota Glogosz
Working Time and the New Economy. The Polish Experience ................................................ 76

Chapter II
SOCIAL ASPECTS OF THE PREDICTED CHANGES IN THE ECONOMY ................................................................. 87
Colette Fagan
Gender, Occupational Class, and the Redrawing of the Boundary to the Working Day in the New Economy in Europe ........................................... 89
Werner Fricke
The History and Future Perspectives of German Work Life Programmes ................................ 116
Agnieszka Smoder
Flexible Working Time – an Opportunity or a Threat to the Work-Life Balance? ... 143
Kazimierz W. Frieske
“Work” and “Life”: The Power of a Cliché ............................................................................. 153
Joanna Miroslaw
Women’s Professional Activity in the Face of Changing Working Time Provisions .......... 160
Jacek P. Męcina
Working Time: Between Security and Competitiveness ....................................................... 173
Contents

Triin Roosalu
From Inequality to Equality in Discretionary Time: Winners, Losers, and a Map for the Journey ................................................................. 188

Chapter III
LEGAL ASPECTS OF WORKING TIME CHANGES IN THE FUTURE ................................................................. 213

Roger Blanpain
The Future of Working Time ................................................................. 215

Daiva Petrylaitė
Flexible Employment Forms: The Opportunity to Establish a More Favourable Working Time Regime ................................................................. 227

Łukasz Pisarczyk
Working Time Regulations: The Tendencies of Changes and Developmental Prospects ................................................................. 238

Arkadiusz Sobczyk
The Future Subjective Scope of Regulations on Working Time ................................................................. 250

Monika Latos-Milksowska
Legal Rules on Working Time and the Demographic Forecasts ................................................................. 261

Chapter IV
WORKING TIME AND THE CHALLENGES OF THE FUTURE: WHERE ARE WE HEADING? ................................................................. 273

Jerzy Wratny
Working Time and the Law. A Few Observations Drawn from the Current Situation ................................................................. 275

Magdalena Barbara Rycak
The Impact of Working Time Regulation on the Quality of Life of Employees ................................................................. 280

Magdalena Buchowska, Katarzyna Zimmer-Drabczyk
The Impact of Time on the Quality of Work ................................................................. 294

Monika Gladoch
The Right to Use the Twelve-Month Settlement Periods as a Way to Have More Flexible Working Time ................................................................. 302

Krzysztof Getka
Increasing Working Time Flexibility – the Bumpy Polish Road: Remarks on Social Dialogue, Trade Unions, Collective Agreements, and the State ................................................................. 307

ABOUT OUR AUTHORS ................................................................. 314