Contents

Introduction — IX

1 How to Combine Theory and Business Practice? — 1
  1.1 About Theory — 1
  1.2 Qualitative, Quantitative, and Mixed Research Methods — 2
  1.3 Cases Studies: Why, How, and What? — 5
  1.4 The Case Study of Panasonic: Do You Believe in its Future Business? — 9
    1.4.1 Company background — 9
    1.4.2 The market at the beginning of the 21st century — 11
    1.4.3 What comes next? — 12
  Bibliography — 16

2 Internationalization Theories — 19
  2.1 The International Product Life-Cycle Theory — 19
    2.1.1 Market entry according to the product life-cycle phase — 19
    2.1.2 Review of Vernon’s model — 21
  2.2 Location Concepts — 22
    2.2.1 Historical foundations — 22
    2.2.2 Location factors — 24
    2.2.2.1 The macro environment — 24
    2.2.2.2 The industry environment — 27
    2.2.2.3 The case study of Sharp (Japan): Leader in liquid crystal display technology – and then? — 30
      2.2.2.3.1 Company origins — 30
      2.2.2.3.2 Technological pioneer in LCD technology — 30
      2.2.2.3.3 The development of Sharp’s operations in Europe — 35
    2.2.3 The Diamond Model — 40
    2.2.4 Review of the location concepts — 43
    2.2.5 Case study: Market entry of Asian high-technology firms in Europe — 45
      2.2.5.1 Location-specific macro analysis — 45
      2.2.5.2 Business activities of high-tech firms from the Far East: A country perspective — 47
  2.3 The Internalization Theory — 54
    2.3.1 The issue of transaction costs — 54
    2.3.2 Emergence of multinational enterprises — 57
    2.3.3 Review of the internalization theory — 58
  2.4 The Eclectic Paradigm — 60
    2.4.1 Advantage categories — 60
2.4.2 Market entry strategy according to advantage categories — 62
2.4.3 Review of the Eclectic Paradigm — 63
2.5 The Uppsala Model of Internationalization — 64
2.5.1 Incremental market entry through accumulated knowledge — 64
2.5.2 Review of the Uppsala model — 68
2.6 Network Theory of Internationalization — 70
2.6.1 Inter-organizational relationships — 70
2.6.1.1 The impact of the resource-based view — 71
2.6.1.2 Resources and dynamic capabilities — 73
2.6.1.3 The case study of Sony: Resources reshuffled — dynamic capabilities disappeared? — 74
2.6.1.3.1 Company origins (the period from 1945 until the 1980s) — 74
2.6.1.3.2 Diversification towards movie and entertainment — 76
2.6.1.3.3 Loss of core competencies in electronics — 77
2.6.1.3.4 Access to LCD technology through inter-organizational relationships — 79
2.6.1.3.5 Market entry strategies for Europe as part of a global value chain — 81
2.6.1.3.6 How about the future? — 84
2.6.1.4 The approach of Johanson and Mattsson — 86
2.6.1.5 The concept of Johanson and Vahlne — 88
2.6.1.6 Review of inter-organizational network positioning approach — 91
2.6.1.7 The case study of Haier (China) — Learning by imitation — 92
2.6.2 Interpersonal relationships approach — 95
2.6.2.1 Early internationalization of the firm — 95
2.6.2.2 The dimension of time — 97
2.6.2.3 Towards a conceptualized model typology of international new ventures and born global firms — 102
2.6.2.4 The phenomenon of the 'born again global' — 105
2.6.2.5 Individual and corporate international entrepreneurship — 106
2.6.2.6 Review of the international new venture, born global, and entrepreneurial concepts — 107
2.6.2.7 The case of Xiaomi: An early internationalizer — made in China — 109
2.7 Summary of Internationalization Theories — 110

Bibliography — 116

3 Market Entry Strategies — 130
3.1 About Strategy and Internationalization — 130
3.2 Case Study: The Global Strategy Concept of Samsung — 133
3.2.1 Samsung management philosophy — history and today — 133
3.2.2 Strategic relationship building — 137
3.2.3 Diversified organization — 140
3.2.4 The strategy of vertical integration of Samsung Electronics — 145
3.2.5 International business expansion — 150
3.2.6 Product design, research, and development — 151
3.3 Foreign Market Entry Strategies — 156
3.3.1 Contractual modes of market entry — 156
3.3.1.1 Indirect and direct export — 156
3.3.1.2 Contract manufacturing — 159
3.3.1.2.1 How it works? — 159
3.3.1.2.2 The case study of Foxconn/Hon Hai Precision Industry Company (Taiwan) — 162
3.3.1.3 Licensing — 164
3.3.1.4 Franchising — 166
3.3.1.5 Management contracts — 167
3.3.1.6 Turnkey contracts — 168
3.3.2 Cooperative modes of market entry — 169
3.3.2.1 Strategic alliances — 169
3.3.2.2 International joint ventures — 172
3.3.2.3 Case Study: International Joint Ventures of LG Electronics (South Korea) and Philips (The Netherlands) — 177
3.3.2.3.1 The partners' situation before establishing their international joint ventures — 177
3.3.2.3.2 The foundation of LG.Philips LCD — 178
3.3.2.3.3 Philips reduces its stake in LG.Philips LCD — 182
3.3.2.3.4 The foundation of LG.Philips Displays — 184
3.3.2.3.5 LG.Philips Displays gets a new name — 188
3.3.2.3.6 What happened next to the international joint venture terminations? — 189
3.3.3 Hierarchical modes of market entry — 192
3.3.3.1 Foreign direct investment — 192
3.3.3.2 The case study of Lenovo: Growth through acquisitions — 195
3.4 Decision Determinants of an International Market Entry — 198
3.4.1 Entry rapidity and proximity to the market — 198
3.4.2 Degree of hierarchical control and financial risk — 199
3.4.3 A two-step decision process approach towards an international market entry — 200
3.4.3.1 Step one - setting strategic priorities — 201
3.4.3.2 Step two - selection of the appropriate market entry mode — 204
3.4.3.2.1 Contracting modes (market mechanisms) — 204
3.4.3.2.2 Cooperation (hybrid forms of foreign market entry) — 208
3.4.3.2.3 Wholly owned subsidiary (hierarchical forms of foreign market entry) — 211
3.5 Case Study: Market Entry Strategies of TCL (China) — 214
3.5.1 About the company — 214
3.5.2 TCL-Thomson Electronics (TTE) international joint venture — 218
3.5.3 The gradual process towards the liquidation of TTE Europe — 221
3.5.4 TCL and Alcatel international joint venture — 223

Bibliography — 225

Subject index — 239