Money Machines
Electronic Financial Technologies, Distancing, and Responsibility in Global Finance

MARK COECKELBERGH
De Montfort University, UK

ASHGATE
Contents

Acknowledgements vii

1 Introduction: The question concerning financial technologies and distance 1

2 From clay tablets to computational finance: A brief history of financial technologies and distancing 17

3 The pure tool that distances: Simmel's phenomenology of money and its relation to philosophy of technology 33

4 Geography 1: Financial ICTs and the global space of flows 63

5 Bitcoin and the metaphysics of money 89

6 Money machines and moral distance: Financial ICTs, automation, and responsibility 107

7 Geography 2: Placing, materializing, humanizing, and personalizing global finance 123

8 Resistance and alternative financial technologies and practices 151

9 Conclusion 177

References 187
Index 197