The Eurasian Project and Europe

Regional Discontinuities and Geopolitics

Edited by

David Lane
Emmanuel College, University of Cambridge, UK

Vsevolod Samokhvalov
Wolfson College, University of Cambridge, UK
Contents

List of Tables and Figures ix
Preface and Acknowledgements x
Notes on Contributors xii
List of Abbreviations xv

Part I Introduction

1 Eurasian Integration as a Response to Neoliberal Globalization 3
   David Lane
   The move to neoliberalism and globalization 4
   Divergent paths to the world economy 5
   The Eurasian alternative 6
   The ambiguity of regionalism 11
   Three possible scenarios 12
      Further decline 12
      The European Union model 13
      Eurasia as a regional counterpoint 16
   The rise of regional blocs 17
   The rise of 'counterpoints' 19
   Conclusion 20

Part II Eurasianism Past and Present

2 The Eurasian Vector of Russia's Development 25
   Ovsey Shkaratan
   Global civilization and local civilizations 26
   The historical roots of Russian specificity 28
   Russia in the context of Eurasianism 30
   Post-socialist trace of Eurasia's impact and its implications for the future 33

3 The Asiatic Roots and Rootedness of the Eurasian Project 38
   Prajakti Kalra and Siddharth Saxena
   The Silk Road revisited 38
   Eurasianism 39
vi Contents

An Asian affair 41
The Eurasian Union 42
Conclusion 47

4 Eurasian Integration: A Project for the 21st Century? 53
Richard Sakwa

The chords of Eurasian integration 54
Greater Europe and Eurasian integration 57
Russian neorevisionism 60
Barking up the wrong tree? 64
Conclusion 68

Part III Eurasianism Under Putin

5 Eurasianism and Putin’s Embedded Civilizationalism 75
Ray Silvius

Critical historicism: Discursive space and geoeconomic/geopolitical reality 76
Typologies of Eurasianism 77
Embedded civilizationalism 80
Embedding civilizations in the Foreign Policy Concepts of the Russian Federation 82
Conclusion 84

6 Putin’s Eurasian Dialectic 89
Paul Benjamin Richardson

A dialectic approach 89
The end of Eurasia: A Euro-Pacific alternative 90
A neo-Eurasian vision: Empire, territory, ideology 91
Putin’s Eurasia 93
Conclusion 97

7 Ideology and Interests in Putin’s Construction of Eurasia 102
Peter J. S. Duncan

Putin’s proposal for a Eurasian Union 103
Eurasianist thought 104
The context of Putin’s Eurasian turn: Russia and the West 106
The ideological context 107
Integration projects before the Eurasian Union 109
The impact of the Eurasian Union proposal 111
Conclusion 113
Contents

8 Eurasia as Discursive Literary Space at the Millennium
Tatiana Filimonova

Sources of Eurasia as discursive space 118
Van Zaichik's and Krusanov's forays into Eurasianism 119
Eurasianism and the myth of Russia's uniqueness 121
Eurasianist alternative histories 122
Symphonic personality in The Greedy Barbarian 124
Eurasianist Orientalism 125
Conclusion 128

Part IV Eurasia as a Region: Problems of Integration

9 European Union Emulation in the Design of Integration
Rilka Dragneva and Kataryna Wolczuk

Institutional design and emulation 137
The Commonwealth of Independent States Economic Union 137
The Customs Union of 1995 137
The Eurasian Economic Community 138
The Common Economic Space of 2003 139
The Eurasian Customs Union and the Single Economic Space 140
Explaining emulation 143
Regionalism as a 'script of modernity' 143
Proximity of, and familiarity with, the European model 144
Concerted positioning of the Eurasian Economic Union as a rival to the European Union in the post-Soviet space 145
Conclusion 147

10 Economic Developments and Institutional Obstacles to the Eurasian Project
Ruslan Dzarasov

The concept of Eurasian integration 153
Advantages and disadvantages of the Customs Union 157
The Eurasian concept and vulnerability of the peripheries 159
The changing division of national income 161
The ruling class and accumulation in a post-Soviet society 162
Conclusion: Eurasian integration and 'The New Great Game' 164

11 Ukraine and Eurasian Regionalism: A Case of Holding Together Integration
Vsevolod Samokhvalov

Introduction 169
The period of the pragmatist approach to Eurasian integration (1991–1999) 170
Contents

The period of politicization (2002–2003) 172
Orange Ukraine and piecemeal involvement (2005–2009) 173
Post-Orange politicization (2010–2014) 175
Human factors and lack of trust 178
Post-Yanukovich Ukraine 179
Conclusion 180

Part V Eurasian Integration in International Context

12 The European Union and Russia: Prospects for Cohabitation in the Contested Region 187
Elena A. Korosteleva

Introduction: Incompatible subjectivities? 187
The analytics of government: A framework 188
The analytics of government: A framework and a practice 189
Discourses of knowledge 191
Technologies 192
Subjectivities 193
Fields of visibility 193
The European Union and Eurasia: A fit-for-purpose recourse? 194
Discourses of knowledge 194
Technologies of power 196
Subjectivities of power 197
Fields of visibility 198
Conclusion: The Eastern Partnership region as a missing variable 199

13 Roles and Realities in Russian Foreign Policy 203
P. N. Chatterje-Doody

Introduction 203
Elite discourse 204
Institutional overlap in ‘Eurasia’ 205
The discursive space of Eurasia 207
The geopolitical reality of Eurasia 209
Conclusion 212

Index 218