Contents

Foreword by Donald J. Boudreaux xv

Acknowledgments xix

Introduction 1

Relationship between Contents of Choice (Robert Murphy) and Human Action (Ludwig von Mises) 15

PART I Human Action

1 The Science of Economics and Human Action 21
2 The Definition and Components of Action 27
3 Economic Theory versus Historical Understanding 35
4 Further Economic Concepts and Principles Flowing from Action 45

PART II Action within the Framework of Society

5 Human Society and the Division of Labor 61
6 The Role of Ideas and the Importance of Reason 77

PART III Economic Calculation

7 Even the Economists Missed the Importance of Monetary Calculation 93
8 What Economic Calculation Can and Can’t Do 107
PART IV Catallactics: Economics of the Market Society

9 Defining and Studying the Market Economy 115
10 How Prices Are Formed on the Market 147
11 Indirect Exchange and Money 165
12 The Misesian Approach to Money & Banking 201
13 Capital, Time Preference, and the Theory of Interest 223
14 Austrian Business Cycle Theory 247

PART V Social Cooperation without a Market

15 The Impossibility of Economic Calculation under Socialism 265

PART VI The Hampered Market Economy

16 Government Intervention in the Market Economy 277

PART VII The Place of Economics in Society

17 Economics and Public Opinion 297

Bibliography 301
Index 307
About the Author 315