Value in Capitalist Society

Rethinking Marx’s Criticism of Capitalism

By

Paul Cobben
Contents

Preface ix

Introduction 1

1 Marx’s Analysis of the Commodity and the Phenomenology of Spirit 12
   Introduction 12
   Sense-Certainty (sinnliche Gewissheit) and the ‘ungeheure Warensammlung’ as Point of Departure 12
   The Contradiction of Perception and the Contradiction of the Determination as Use Value 15
   The Sublation of Perception in Understanding and of Use Value in Exchange Value 17
   The Transition from Consciousness to Self-Consciousness and from Market to Private Domain 21
   The ‘Begierde’ and the Satisfaction of the Real Individual’s Needs 23
   The Life-and-Death Struggle for Recognition and the Struggle of Competition at the Market 24
   The Lord/Bondsman Relation and the Capitalist Free Market 26
   Conclusion 37

2 The Realm of Culture and the Historical Process in which the Proletarian Becomes Self-Aware 39
   Introduction 39
   The Development in the Phenomenology of Spirit and European History 40
   The Communist Revolution and the Realm of Culture 42
   a. The Development of the Church as Presupposition of the Realm of Culture 44
   b. The Development of the Church and Individual Proletarian Self-Consciousness 45
   c. The Realm of Culture 47
   d. The Realm of Culture and the Realization of Revolutionary, Proletarian Self-Consciousness 50
   Conclusion 52
3 Marx's Analysis of the Commodity and Hegel's Grundlinien der Philosophie des Rechts  54
   Introduction  54
   The Project of the Philosophy of Right in Relation to the Phenomenology of Spirit  54
   Abstract Right and Morality as the Systematic Development of the Lord/Bondsman Relation, Starting from the Concept of Pure
   Freedom  56
   The Coherence between the Development of the Phenomenology of Spirit and the Philosophy of Right  58
   The System of Needs as the Systematic Development of the Realm of Culture Starting from the Concept of Pure Freedom  60
   The Development of the Value-Form as Marx's Counterpart of the Development of Abstract Right  63
   Marx's Reception of the System of Needs  64
   Conclusion  68

4 Hegel's Determination of Value at the Level of Abstract Right in the Light of Marx's Criticism  73
   Introduction  73
   Use Value and the Good Life  73
   Universal Value in Relation to Use Value  75
   Marx and the Equal Exchange between Persons  79
   The Determination of Abstract Labor at the Level of the Market  84
   Marx's Conception of Value (Abstract Labor) in Comparison with Hegel's Conception  86
   Conclusion  87

5 The System of Needs in the Light of Marx's Criticism  89
   Introduction  89
   The Realization of Abstract Right as a Moment of the System of Needs  90
   The Realization of Intention and Welfare as a Moment of the System of Needs  92
   The "Scheinen der Vernünftigkeit" (Show of Rationality)  94
   The "Scheinen der Vernünftigkeit" and Real Exchange  98
   Conclusion  106
CONTENTS

6 Wage Labor and the Corporation: Obstacles for the Free Market? 108
   Introduction 108
   The System of Needs as an Institution in Service of the Realization of Freedom 108
   Wage Labor and the Realization of Particular Welfare 109
   Wage Labor, the Market and Their Relevance for Our Time 111
   Intellectual Labor in Its Relation to the Market 116
   The Dynamics of the Market and the Relation between Intellectual and Manual Labor 117
   Conclusion 121

7 Capital as Community of Value 123
   Introduction 123
   The Capitalist as Person in the Market 123
   The Capitalist Company as Community of Value 129
   The Relation of the Employee to the Capitalist Company as Community of Value 131
   The Quality of Technological Innovations 137
   Conclusion 138

8 Modern Society and the Ongoing Revision of the Good Life 140
   Introduction 140
   The Multitude of Companies and the Unity of the Good Life 140
   Innovation: The Transformation of the Particular Interest Outside the Framework of the Good Life 146
   The Institutional Structure which can Guarantee Harmonic Unity between Developing Particular Interests 149
   Conclusion 151

9 Mediating Institutions between Market and State 155
   Introduction 155
   The State as Presupposition of the Free Market 159
   The Reproduction of the State and the Mediating Institutions in the Light of Sustainability 163
   Conclusion 171

10 The Identity of the Sustainable State and the Adequate Determination of Value 173
    Introduction 173