Discourse and Management
Critical Perspectives Through the Language Lens

Gerlinde Mautner
Professor of English Business Communication, Institute for English Business Communication, WU (Vienna University of Economics and Business), Austria

With contributions from:

Nick Ellis
Professor of Marketing Management, Durham University, UK

Chris Hackley
Professor of Marketing, Royal Holloway, University of London, UK

Cliff Oswick
Professor in Organization Theory, Cass Business School, City University London, UK

Ruth Wodak
Distinguished Professor Emerita and Chair in Discourse Studies, Lancaster University, UK
Contents

List of Figures, Tables, Boxes and Vignettes ix
Acknowledgements xii

Introduction 1

1 The wood and the trees: Introducing discourse 7
   1.1 Why communication matters 8
   1.2 And why it is often underrated 9
   1.3 The linguistic turn and social constructionism 10
   1.4 Defining discourse 16
   1.5 Key points to remember 24

2 Keep your distance: Doing discourse analysis from a critical perspective 27
   2.1 What does it mean to be critical? 28
   2.2 Critical Discourse Analysis 33
   2.3 Being critical in practice 37
   2.4 Key points to remember 39

3 Untangling the web: Organizing discourse data 41
   3.1 What are data? 42
   3.2 Text and context 45
   3.3 Spoken data 49
   3.4 Compiling corpora 53
   3.5 Key points to remember 57

4 The devil is in the detail: How language makes meaning 60
   4.1 The added value of looking at linguistic detail 61
Contents

4.2 Language as a system of choices
4.3 Conversation
4.4 Representing people
4.5 Representing events and actions
4.6 Expressing viewpoints and attitudes
4.7 Metaphor
4.8 Key points to remember

5 Who do you think you are? Language and identity
5.1 What is identity?
5.2 Why is identity relevant for organization and management?
5.3 How does identity manifest itself in language?
5.4 Entrepreneurial: a keyword as identity marker
5.5 Self as product: an extended metaphor in action
5.6 Key points to remember

6 Siren voices: Language and persuasion
6.1 What is persuasion?
6.2 Linguistic choices for persuasive effect
6.3 Marketing communications: Advertising, packaging and labelling
6.4 Selling marketing: a critical linguistic view of marketing textbooks
6.5 Key points to remember

7 Might is right: Language and power
7.1 What is power?
7.2 Power over, in and of discourse
7.3 Linguistic manifestations of power
7.4 Power and gatekeeping: the job interview
7.5 Key points to remember

8 Mind the gap: Critiquing critical approaches
8.1 Critiquing the critical
8.2 Theory, data and method
8.3 Leaps and traps: dealing with bias
8.4 The bottom line: CDA in management
8.5 Key points to remember

Conclusion

References
Index