Contents

List of figures  ix
List of tables  x
List of contributors  xi
Foreword  xviii
Stephanie Hemelryk Donald
Acknowledgements  xx

1  Introduction
  Michael Keane  1

PART I  THE CULTURAL AND CREATIVE INDUSTRIES RECONSIDERED

2  Doing Chinese cultural industries: a reflection on the Blue Book syndrome and remedy paradigm
  Zitong Qiu  15

3  The ten thousand things, the Chinese Dream and the creative ↔ cultural industries
  Michael Keane  27

4  The makers are coming! China’s long tail revolution
  Jing Wang  43

5  Balinghou and qilinghou: generational difference and creativity in China
  Bjarke Liboriussen  64

6  The artyficial paradise: municipal face-work in a Chinese boomtown
  Michael Alexander Ulfstjerne  80

PART II  ADVICE TO GOVERNMENT, IDEOLOGY AND FUTURE CHALLENGES FACING THE CULTURAL INDUSTRIES IN CHINA

7  Editor’s introduction
  Michael Keane  99

8  The cultural industries in China: a historical overview
  Xiaoming Zhang  105

9 The challenges of China’s culture ‘going to the world’
Wuwei Li

10 Chinese culture ‘going out’: an overview of government policies and an analysis of challenges and opportunities for international collaboration
Huailiang Li

11 Ethnic cultural industries and the ‘one place, one product strategy’
Na Yi

12 Globalization and ethnic grounded cultural creativity in Yunnan
Yan Li and Ying Huang

13 Cultural organizations in China: creating digital platforms for success
Marina Guo

PART III TRADITIONAL CULTURAL AND CREATIVE INDUSTRY SECTORS IN FLUX

14 Editor’s introduction
Michael Keane

15 The cultural governance of mass media in contemporary China
Florian Schneider

16 The regionalization of co-production in the film industries of Hong Kong SAR and Mainland China
Peichi Chung and Lianyuan Yi

17 Chinese transnational cinema and the collaborative tilt toward South Korea
Brian Yecies

18 Chinese documentary: towards commercialization
Yingchi Chu

19 The urban-rural divide in China’s cultural industries: the case of Chinese radio
Wei Lei, Lauren Gorfinkel and Wanning Sun

20 Animation industry in China: managed creativity or state discourse?
Anthony Y.-H. Fung and Vicky Ho

21 From ‘Nothing to My Name’ to ‘I Am a Singer’: market, capital, and politics in the Chinese music industry
Qian Wang and Jeroen de Kloet
Contents  vii

22 China’s self-help industry: American(ized) life advice in China 311
Eric C. Hendriks

PART IV  ASSESSING DIGITAL LIVES, CONSTRUCTING CREATIVE FUTURES

23 Editor’s introduction 331
Michael Keane

24 Copyright in China’s digital cultural industries 339
Lucy Montgomery and Eric Priest

25 Commercial and digital transformation of Chinese television 360
Ruoyun Bai

26 Between sustaining and disruptive innovation: China’s digital publishing industry in the age of mobile Internet 377
Xiang Ren

27 Getting connected in China: taming the mobile screen 396
Elaine Jing Zhao

28 The e-commerce revolution: ensuring trust and consumer rights in China 412
Ming Cheung

29 Elderly people and the Internet: a demographic reconsideration 431
Huan Wu

PART V  RECALIBRATING SPACE, TRADITION AND REGIONAL IDENTITY

30 Editor’s introduction 447
Michael Keane

31 Between contemporary and traditional: the ongoing search for a Chinese architectural identity 452
Christiane M. Herr

32 Chinese fashion designers: rebuilding from the centre of the world 468
Tim Lindgren

33 Spectacles, showcases, marketplaces (and even public spheres): Chinese film festivals as cultural industries 484
Ran Ma and Cindy Hing-Yuk Wong

34 Who is the knowledge gatekeeper in the creative cluster? A case study of Guangdong Industrial Design City 506
Juncheng Dai and Michael Keane
A comparative perspective on the industrialization of art in the Republican period in Shanghai and today's creative industry clusters

Jane Zheng

Index