ANTHROPOLOGY
AND THE ECONOMY
OF SHARING

Thomas Widlok
CONTENTS

List of figures and tables

Introduction: Sharing – an alternative xiii

1. This is not a gift 1
   Introduction 1
   Ceci n’est pas un don 2
   The myth of reciprocity 12
   The realities of sharing 21
   Conclusion 27

2. Sharing the prey: Evolutionary assumptions 30
   Introduction 30
   Origins of sharing 30
   Assessing the primate heritage 32
   The sharing curve 34
   From origin to function 38
   The risk-reduction function 45
   The levelling function 48
   The versatility of sharing 51
   Conclusion 56

3. The ethnography of sharing demand 59
   Introduction 59
   Sharing as a complex institution 60
Contents

Sharing and kinship 64
The language of sharing 68
Sharing and bodily presence 72
Opportunities instead of obligations 78
Making and unmaking demands 83
Conclusion 87

4. The things we share 89
Introduction 89
Affording to share 90
Sharing big items and big packages 94
Sharing commensality 98
Sharing a place 100
Sharing Halbzeug in a community of practice 106
Conclusion 111

5. It is a shareholder’s world 113
Introduction 113
To hold a share – and to hold on to it 114
Corporate holding and incorporated holding 115
Becoming a shareholder 121
Being a claimant 125
Sharing in the time of shareholding 127
Conclusion 133

6. Introducing the sharing economy 136
Introduction 136
Sharing economy as the answer – what was the question? 137
When “sharing” is renting (out) 140
When “sharing” means having and insisting on keeping 142
When “sharers” insist on giving 147
When paying tax means enabling sharing 152
When “sharing” is just a button 157
Conclusion 161

7. The time to share 163
Introduction 163
Oversharing – sharing all over? 164
Premature giving 169
Belated giving 171
Contents ix

Picking the right time 174
Ultimate sharing: Sharing to the end – but not beyond 179
Conclusion 184

Conclusions: The limits of sharing and the finite self 187

Bibliography 197
Index 212