War, Power and the Economy
Mercantilism and state formation in 18th-century Europe

A. González Enciso
Contents

List of figures xi
List of tables xiii
Preface xv
Acknowledgements xvii

Introduction 1

Three powers looking for resources 1
Spain and its eighteenth-century rivals 5
War and the early modern state 7
Method and timeframe 11

1 Changing strategies and global power in the long eighteenth century 15
1.1 The long consequences of Utrecht 15
1.2 Warfare interests and motives 20
1.3 Spain in eighteenth-century international politics 23

2 Eighteenth-century realities and historiographical approaches 30
2.1 Absolutism vs. parliamentarism 30
2.2 The eighteenth-century military revolution 35
2.3 The increasing war cost 40
2.4 Fiscal-military states: the development of a methodological concept 44

3 Administering the fiscal-military state:
ordinary revenues – trusting in a consumer’s world 53
3.1 The increase in the tax trawl 53
3.2 The fiscal structure: direct or indirect taxes 58
Contents

3.3 Divergent paths: the trend of the fiscal structure in the long eighteenth century  64
3.4 Tobacco and metals, the pearls of the Empire  84
3.5 Possibilities and flexibility of fiscal policies  89
3.6 Changes in the fiscal structure as from the eighties and the breakdown of some systems  93

4 Increasing revenue through administration change: direct administration of taxes 100

4.1 Direct administration vs. tax farming. Why were taxes farmed out?  100
4.2 England takes the lead  103
4.3 The impossible reform of the French system  105
4.4 Spain facing the modernity of direct administration  106
4.5 Administering to implement a new system  109
4.6 A political agenda against tax farmers?  112
4.7 Consequences and stocktaking  114
4.8 The tax farmers’ profit  118
4.9 Looking to the future of finance possibilities  122

5 Growing needs: the cost of war and extraordinary revenue 126

5.1 The management of extraordinary expenditure  126
5.2 Two different and similar models: Great Britain and France  128
5.3 Spain: from the extraordinary single tax to the need of debt  134

6 Foreseeing difficulties and administering for the future: the public debt 150

6.1 The necessary public debt  150
6.2 British borrowing: the love of debt  154
6.3 France, the unmanageable debt  159
6.4 Spain, debt phobia  167
6.5 Debt and destiny  184

7 The administration of income: spending and the contractor state 186

7.1 Contractor state: a precise concept  186
7.2 The contractor state and fiscal-military state  189
7.3 Contractor state and mercantilism  191