Energy Relations in the Euro-Mediterranean

A Political Economy Perspective
Contents

1 Introduction 1

2 The Political Economy of the Euro-Med Energy Relations 9
  2.1 Setting the Context 9
    2.1.1 Macroeconomic Trends in the Southern and Eastern Mediterranean Region 9
    2.1.2 Euro-Med Trade: The Crucial Role of Energy 12
    2.1.3 The Regional Geopolitical Context 14
  2.2 Research Question and Hypotheses 15
    2.2.1 Energy: A Means for Regional Economic and Political Cooperation? 15
    2.2.2 The First Hypothesis: The Focus on Network Energies 18
    2.2.3 The Second Hypothesis: The Step-by-Step Dynamics 20
  2.3 The Theoretical Framework 22
    2.3.1 International Political Economy: Origins and Theoretical Traditions 22
    2.3.2 The Concept of Complex Interdependence 29
    2.3.3 The Functionalist Approach 32
3 Case Study I: Beyond Nabucco: Evolution of the Southern Gas Corridor 43
  3.1 The EU Gas Security of Supply Architecture 43
    3.1.1 The EU Gas Market: Production, Demand and Import Requirements 43
    3.1.2 The EU Pipeline Suppliers: Russia, Norway, Algeria, Libya 49
    3.1.3 Global LNG Markets and Their Impact on Europe 61
    3.1.4 The Russian-Ukrainian Gas Crises and the EU Quest for Diversification 65
  3.2 The Genesis of Nabucco and the Evolution of the Southern Gas Corridor 69
    3.2.1 The Formulation of the Nabucco Concept Between Market and Politics 69
    3.2.2 The Potential Caspian Suppliers: Azerbaijan and Turkmenistan 72
    3.2.3 The Potential Middle Eastern Suppliers: Iraq and Iran 78
    3.2.4 The Failure of Nabucco and the Evolution of the Southern Gas Corridor 83
  3.3 Beyond Nabucco: The Need for a New EU-Turkey Gas Partnership 87
    3.3.1 The Southern Gas Corridor and the EU-Turkey Energy Relations 87
    3.3.2 The New Potential Middle Eastern Supplier: The Kurdistan Region of Iraq 89
    3.3.3 The New Potential Eastern Mediterranean Supplier: Israel 91
    3.3.4 The 2014 Ukraine Crisis and the Likely Impact on the Southern Gas Corridor 94
    3.3.5 The Need for a New “EU-Turkey Gas Task Force” and the Key Role of the Energy Community 96
4.1 The Southern and Eastern Mediterranean Energy Landscape
   4.1.1 Energy Demand and Supply
   4.1.2 Energy Consumption and Efficiency
   4.1.3 Energy Production
   4.1.4 The Crucial Role of Electricity
4.2 The Regional Renewable Energy Potential and the Rise of Large-Scale Projects
   4.2.1 The Renewable Energy Potential of the Region
   4.2.2 The Potential Benefits of Renewable Energy in the Region
   4.2.3 The Evolution of Desertec and Other Large-Scale Renewable Energy Projects
   4.2.4 The Emergence of National Renewable Energy Plans
4.3 Rethinking Renewable Energy in the Region: The Need for a New Approach to Translate Potential into Reality
   4.3.1 Barriers to the Development of Renewable Energy in the Region
   4.3.2 The Commercial Barrier
   4.3.3 The Infrastructural Barrier
   4.3.4 The Regulatory Barrier
   4.3.5 The Financial Barrier
   4.3.6 The Need for a New "Euro-Med Renewable Task Force" with a Key Focus on Med-TSO, MEDREG, the EIB and the EBRD
5 Results and Policy Implications: Toward a "Euro-Med Energy Community"
5.1 A Functionalist Approach to the Euro-Med Energy Relations: Three Scenarios
   5.1.1 Functional Scenario: High Economic Spillovers Versus No Political Spillovers
5.1.2 Liberal Transition Scenario: High Economic and Political Spillovers 171
5.1.3 Geopolitical Disruption Scenario: Limited Economic and Political Spillovers 173
5.2 The Key Role of Transnational Institutions in Future Euro-Med Energy Relations 174
5.2.1 The Euro-Med Energy Relations: A “Zone of Complex Interdependence” 174
5.2.2 The Role of Transnational Institutions in the Euro-Med Energy Relations 176
5.2.3 Energy Community 177
5.2.4 Med-TSO and MEDREG 179
5.2.5 The EIB and the EBRD 181
5.3 Policy Implications: Toward a “Euro-Med Energy Community” 184
5.3.1 The Need for New Action on Euro-Med Energy Cooperation 184
5.3.2 Enhancing the Regional Gas Cooperation Starting with an “EU-Turkey Gas Task Force” 185
5.3.3 Unlocking the Regional Renewable Energy Potential with a “Euro-Med Renewable Energy Task Force” 190
5.3.4 Coordinating the Action of the Two “Task Forces” with a “Euro-Med Energy Community” 194
5.3.5 The Key Role of a “Euro-Med Energy Community” in Ensuring the Financing of Future Energy Projects in the Region 196
5.3.6 The Crucial Difference Between the Proposed “Task Forces” and the Recently-Launched “UfM Euro-Med Energy Platforms” 201

6 Conclusions 205
