Incentivized Development in China

Leaders, Governance, and Growth in China’s Counties

DAVID J. BULMAN
Contents

List of Tables

List of Figures

Acknowledgments

1 Introduction
   Explaining the Developmental Orientation of Local Governments
   Argument of the Book
   Research Design
   Structure of the Book

2 Understanding China’s County-Level Economic Growth
   Broad Trends in County-Level Growth
   Accounting for Growth: Productivity versus Capital Accumulation
   Growing County Attractiveness: Push and Pull Factors
   Unexplained Variation in County Economic Outcomes
   Conclusions
   Chapter Appendix: Growth Accounting Data and Methodology

3 Governance for Growth: Investment Attraction and Institutional Development
   Pro-Growth Local Governance
   Local Economic Development and Government Failure
   Local Economic Development and Market Failures
   Local Growth Effects of Good County Governance
   Conclusions

4 First in Command: Leadership Roles for County Development
   The Leadership Role of County Party Secretaries
   Systematic Leader Effects on Growth Outcomes
Contents

Leadership Characteristics to Influence Growth Outcomes:
The Four Cs 124
Conclusions 149

5 Paths to Promotion: The Inconsistent Importance of Economic Performance 151
Institutional Development of Personnel Management 153
Leadership Tenure, Career Paths, and Elite Mobility 159
Does Economic Growth Predict Promotions? 171
Patron-Based Growth or Meritocratic Tournament
Promotions? 178
Conclusion 191

6 Ignoring Growth: The Institutional and Economic
Costs of Maintaining Stability 193
Regional Variation in Promotion Criteria: Stability Maintenance 196
Let Some Places Get Rich First 207
Consequences of Stability-Based Promotion Incentives 215
Conclusion 223

7 Conclusion: A New Political Economy of Uneven
Regional Development 225

Appendix 1: Interview Methodology 233
Appendix 2: Data Description 235
Bibliography 239
Index 267