Aid Paradoxes in Afghanistan
Building and Undermining the State

Nematullah Bizhan
Contents

List of figures x
List of tables xi
Note on transliteration, dates and currency xii
Preface xiii
Glossary xv
List of abbreviations xvii

Introduction 1
Revenues and state building 3
Research method 5
Book outline 6

PART I
Conceptual framework: aid and state building 9

1 Aid and state building 11
   Introduction 11
   Why are state revenue sources relevant? 12
   Tax states 17
   Aid-dependent states 19
   The effects of oil revenue 21
   Distinction between aid and oil-revenue rentier effects 23
   Conclusion 28

PART II
The history of revenue and state formation in Afghanistan, 1747–2000 37

2 Reliance on external revenue: Afghanistan from 1747 to 2000 39
   Introduction 39
   The society: an inheritance of history 40
Relying on tribute for state building: the importance of external revenue to the Durrani Empire (1747–1824) 41
Subsidies and state building: the loss of tribute and search for alternative revenue (1824–1879) 45
Institution building 46
Consolidation of a modern buffer state (1880–1919): the significance of subsidies and external military support 48
Civil and military administration 51
State–society relations 52
Amanullah Khan’s reforms: the loss of subsidies, budget surplus and fiscal decline (1919–1929) 53
Foreign aid and state building: reshaping the state-building process (1929–1978) 55
The rise of a weak rentier state 57
Decline in foreign aid 58
The state and the mujahidin tanzīms (organizations) and sources of revenue: conflict in state–society relations (1978–2000) 60
The mujahidin government financial crises and Pakistani aid to the Taliban 62
Conclusion 64

PART III
Post-9/11 state building in Afghanistan 75

3 Rebuilding an aid-based rentier state 77
   Introduction 77
   Establishing a new political order 77
   Building the state institutions 78
      Development planning and aid 81
   Managing aid dependency: a challenge for state building 82
   Access to foreign aid: a prime focus 87
   Improving fiscal management 89
      Aid modality: undermining institution building 91
   Government preoccupation with foreign donors 93
      Relations at the administration level 94
      Relations in regard to senior appointments 96
   Conclusion 97

4 Reforms and setbacks: rebuilding the revenue system 104
   Introduction 104
   State revenue sources 105