Human Resource Development in Twentieth-Century Japan

Inoki Takenori

Translated by Tony Gonzalez

Japan Publishing Industry Foundation for Culture
CONTENTS

FOREWORD TO THE ENGLISH EDITION ...... 7

INTRODUCTION ...... 9
   Key issues / The labor economics perspective / Human resource development is a long-term issue

CHAPTER 1
EDUCATION IN THE EDO AND MEIJI PERIODS ...... 15
   1. From provincial and private education to "schools" ...... 16
      Systems for selecting and educating clansmen / The terakoya / Gōgaku and shijuku / Family schools and merchant worksite training / The birth of elementary education / From an "Education Order" to a "School Order"
   2. Transfer of foreign knowledge and skills to Japan ...... 30
      Foreign advisors / Japanese pupils / Legal advisors / Education for engineers / Modern science and academics / Music / Arts and crafts / The importance of technology transfer through relocation / Study abroad

CHAPTER 2
INDUSTRIALIZATION AND THE LABOR FORCE ...... 47
   1. Sites of industrial education and labor ...... 49
      Industrial schools / Training artisans / The role of military arsenals / Trainee systems in military arsenals
   2. Labor conditions and labor disputes ...... 56
      Cotton spinning / The state of the "lower class" / Female factory workers and corporate education / The birth of labor unions / Intensified protest
   3. Skills and length of service ...... 70
      Adverse effects of labor mobility
   4. Research & development and engineers ...... 74
      Hara Takashi and the University Ordinance / Challenges for university graduates / Advances in science and technology / Think tanks
CHAPTER 3
THE MILITARY AND INDUSTRY ...... 83
1. Selection and training methods of the Imperial Army and Navy ...... 85
The Imperial Army Cadet School, Academy, and College / The Imperial Navy Academy and the Imperial Navy College / Military families / Ranks and promotion of officers / Promotion systems in the Imperial Army
2. Military technology and private firms ...... 96
From fighter planes to bullet trains / Effects of World War II on human resources / Wartime wage systems / Workforce mobilization and the “contact effect” / Career soldiers in postwar Japan

CHAPTER 4
POSTWAR SCHOOLS AND EDUCATIONAL INVESTMENT ...... 107
1. The occupation and educational reform ...... 109
Educational reform directives from the GHQ / From the Imperial Rescript on Education to the Fundamental Law of Education / Demise of the old school system / Extension of education to women
2. A validation of human capital theory ...... 117
The phenomenal rise in school advancement rates / Education as investment and consumption / Return on investment in college education / Lost income during education
3. Actual movements ...... 123
Selection mechanisms / The value of formal education / At what stage does education raise productivity? / Vocational education as an element of higher education

CHAPTER 5
HUMAN RESOURCE DEVELOPMENT IN FACTORIES ...... 133
1. Education and training for blue-collar workers ...... 134
The relation between labor and productivity / Forms of education and training / Focus on on-the-job training
2. Why on-the-job training is effective ...... 144
Passing on “living knowledge” / Improving skills at low cost / Democratic methods for personnel selection
3. Lessons from developing countries ...... 148
4. Japan’s period of rapid economic development ...... 150
Responses to uncertainty, change, and irregularities / Sophistication of capital equipment / Expansion of back-office departments
5. Are “Japanese employment practices” unique to Japan? ...... 155
Long-term employment and seniority wages / Long-term employment at large companies / A long-term look at employment practices
CHAPTER 6

WHITE-COLLAR WORKERS ······ 165

1. White-collar workers before and after World War II ······ 167
   Prewar trends / Postwar trends / Education and company size / Postwar Marxism among upper management

2. "Japanese employment practices" and white-collar workers ······ 173
   Lifetime employment and seniority systems / Meritocracy and evaluation systems

3. Forms of Remuneration ······ 175
   The three types of performance-based wages / Performance-based wages in the workplace

4. Japan and the United States ······ 180
   Company A / Company B / Company C / Risk and departmental disparity / Hiring and promotion in Japan and the United States

5. A model for white-collar workers ······ 186
   Challenges of skills assessment / Risk and responsibility

CHAPTER 7

THE PUBLIC SECTOR ······ 189

1. Government Appointments ······ 191
   The Pendleton Civil Service Reform Act / Imperial officials / Postwar "fast-track" officials

2. Human resource systems in the Metropolitan Tokyo Government ······ 194
   Features of the appointment system / The Metropolitan Tokyo system / Screening for suitability through competitive principles

3. Revolving-door politics ······ 201
   The three exits from Japan's revolving door / The revolving door leading to government corporations / Criticisms of the revolving door / A hypothesis for the rationality of revolving-door politics / Length of service at government corporations / Quantitative issues related to public officials / Civil servants as experts / Allocation of human resources among divisions / Movement of personnel from central to local government

CHAPTER 8

EMIGRATION AND IMMIGRATION ······ 223

1. Overseas immigration and Japan—US friction ······ 224
   Anti-Japanese movements after the Russo-Japanese War / Immigration to South America and the Manchurian colonies / Internment of Japanese

2. Immigration and Emigration after World War II ······ 231
   Internment and withdrawal / Asian power in the United States / Foreign workers in Japan in the 1990s
CONTENTS

CONCLUSION ...... 237
    Afterword to the first edition ...... 240
    Afterword to the expanded edition ...... 241

WORKS CITED ...... 244

APPENDIX ...... 260

ABOUT THE AUTHOR ...... 263