Paul G. Clifford

The China Paradox

At the Front Line of Economic Transformation
Contents

Chapter 1: The Hybrid Model at the Heart of a Vibrant New China —— 1

Chapter 2: Early Attempts at Industrialization: The Empire and the Republic —— 9

Chapter 3: The First Decades of the People’s Republic: The Soviet Model ... and Worse —— 17
  The Fate of China’s Capitalists: From Ally to Enemy —— 18
  The Dysfunctional Soviet Model Is Embraced —— 20
  And Worse ... Beyond the Soviet Model —— 26
  The Brutal Assault on Intellectuals and Science —— 30
  The Dead End of the Mao Years —— 35

Chapter 4: Wrongs Are Righted, the Reforms Take Shape —— 39
  Setting the Boundaries of Change —— 46
  The Initial Reforms—Limited and Tentative —— 47
  The Reforms Go into a High Gear —— 51
  The Reforms Lose Steam (2002 Onward) —— 52
  China’s Economic Planning Today —— 53

Chapter 5: What to Do with the State-Owned Enterprises? —— 57
  Weaning the SOEs Off the State (1978–93) —— 57
  Central Planning Fades Away —— 60
  Selling off the “Dogs” —— 62
  Transforming the Large SOEs —— 64
  Can SOE Culture Be Changed? —— 72
  SOE Reform Falters (2003 Onward) —— 74
  A New Type of SOE Shows the Way Forward —— 78

Chapter 6: The Private Economy Emerges Unannounced —— 83
  TVEs—Engine for Growth as the Reforms Took Shape —— 84
  POEs Flourish, Especially If Far from the Capital —— 87
  Wanxiang—A Pioneering Private Company Forges Its Own Path —— 88
  Huawei—A Private Firm as “National Champion” —— 91
  Private Firms Sustain the Economy —— 93
Chapter 7: Magnet for Foreign Investment — 95
  Why Did China Welcome FDI? — 96
  Why Has China Been so Attractive to Foreign Investors? — 97
  China Has Its Cake and Gets to Eat It, Too — 99
  Win-Win in the Auto Industry — 100
  Why Did China Neglect Logistics and Resist Its “Opening Up” to FDI? — 107
  The Motorola Breakthrough — 111
  Why FDI Will Stick with China — 115

Chapter 8: Business Models at the Heart of China’s Emergence — 119
  Model 1. Learn and Catch Up — 119
    Disappointment in Auto and Semiconductor — 121
    The Model Works Well—In Consumer Products, High-Speed Rail, and Nuclear Power — 124
  Model 2. Picking off Underperforming Overseas Assets — 129
    Obstacles to China ODI — 130
    The Government/CCP — 136
    Financial Institutions — 137
    Chinese Firms — 140
    A Little-Known Firm from Anhui Grows in Africa — 141
    Transportation, Mines, and Downstream Industry — 146
    How to Assess the China, Inc. Business Model in Emerging Markets — 148
  Model 4. Novel Product or Technology Breakthrough — 149
    Implications for the Emergence of Chinese Firms on the Global Stage? — 153

Chapter 9: What Could Disrupt or Sustain the China Paradox? — 155
  Peace, Stability and the CCP — 155
    The CCP Has Survived and Adapted — 156
    How Well Is the CCP Functioning Today? — 157
    The CCP Is Embedded in Businesses — 159
    China’s Fault Lines and Tensions — 161
    The CCP and China’s Future — 161
  The Rule of Law — 166
  Culture, Education, and Civil Society — 168
    A Cocktail of Confucianism and Leninism — 169