

Esra Akcan

Open Architecture

Migration, Citizenship, and the Urban Renewal of Berlin-Kreuzberg
by IBA-1984/87

Birkhäuser
Basel

6

Preface

10

Introduction

-
- 10 Toward an Open Architecture
  - 11 Modernism and New Ground Plan Conceptions (1918–1945)
  - 18 Flexibility and Adaptability of Form (1945–1972)
  - 22 Collectivity and Collaboration (1966–Present)
  - 25 Participation and Democratizing Democracy (1968–Present)
  - 29 Multiplicity of Meaning (1983–Present)
  - 32 Rightlessness and Citizens to Come (1933–Present)
  - 36 Notes on Method

PART 1 Open Architecture as Collectivity

46

STOP I Critical Reconstruction: Open Architecture as Collaboration?

- 48 The History of Building Exhibitions, Social Housing, and the Historical City
- 58 Josef Paul Kleihues and the Road to the Building Exhibition
- 62 Rob Krier and the Essentialist Ethnicity of Urban Design
- 71 The Critical Reception of IBA-1984/87
- 74 Private Is Political: Hatice Uzun on Rob Krier

88

STROLL 1 From Schinkelplatz to Checkpoint Charlie

96

STOP II Buildings That Die More Than Once: Open Architecture as Collectivity

- 96 What Comes before and after Form, according to Aldo Rossi
- 109 A Refugee and a Spousal Migrant: Çetiner and N.Y.
- 114 A Synergetic Architectural Competition
- 127 From Vision to Reality and Back Again with Bohigas, Mackay, and Martorell

150

STROLL 2 From Checkpoint Charlie to Potsdamer Platz

160

STOP III Opened after Habitation

- 160 Oswald Mathias Ungers's Berlin
- 173 Block 1 and Autonomous Architecture
- 183 Open by Definition: F. Barış and the Appropriation of the Perfected

194

STROLL 3 From Potsdamer Platz to Tiergarten

PART 2 Open Architecture as Democracy

---

208

STOP IV Gentle Urban Renewal: Participation and Radical Democracy

- 210 Hardt-Waltherr Hämer and Participatory Urban Renewal without Displacement
- 218 Residents of Block 81, Cihan Arın and Noncitizen Rights to the City
- 230 Residents of Block 76/78, Heide Moldenhauer and One Woman at a Time
- 239 Radical Democracy and Limits of Hospitality

252

STROLL 4 From Kottbusser Tor to Schlesisches Tor

258

STOP V A Building with Many Speakers: Open Architecture as Critical Participation

- 258 Autonomy versus Participation?
- 261 Álvaro Siza and the Permeable Block
- 268 Bonjour Tristesse Housing and Anticipation of the Residents' Voice
- 272 Yüksel Karaçizmeli's Kitchen
- 278 The Seniors, the Children, and the Graffiti Artists

288

STROLL 5 From Schlesisches Tor to Fraenkelufer

PART 3 Open Architecture as Multiplicity

---

298

STOP VI Open History in the Past Subjunctive Tense

- 298 The History of Possibility
- 300 Rem Koolhaas's Berlin and OMA's Checkpoint Charlie
- 316 Peter Eisenman and an Avant la Lettre Memorial to the Holocaust

336

STROLL 6 A History of a Possible Kreuzberg

344

STOP VII Exit Implies Entries' Lament: Open Architecture in John Hejduk's IBA-1984/87 Immigrant Housing

- 345 John Hejduk and the Architecture of the Adventure Game
- 356 Appropriation as Subordination of the Architect
- 361 Yeliz Erçakmak and Noncitizen Rights to Architecture

371

Appendix (See detailed Appendix contents on page 371)

Map of Stops and Strolls (Foldout in Backcover)