Clothing and Landscape in Victorian England
Working-class Dress and Rural Life
Rachel Worth
CONTENTS

List of illustrations vii
Acknowledgments xi

Introduction 1

1 Change and transition in Victorian England: the rural context 8
A southern landscape of Englishness 11
The decline of agriculture 13
The 'condition' of the agricultural labourer: wages, income, poverty and clothing 15
Rural discontent and trade unionism 18
Rural–urban migration 21
Rural history and the history of working-class dress 23

2 Women's work, education and the domesticity of dress: surveying and documenting the rural (I) 28
The parliamentary commissions of enquiry of 1843 and 1867 32
The Daily News survey of 1891 37
'A woman's place is in the home': the conflicting demands of field work, education and ideals of domesticity 39

3 Clothing and its acquisition in a changing society: surveying and documenting the rural (II) 48
Poverty and the scarcity of clothing 50
Poor relief, charity and clothing clubs 56
Finding a voice: working-class perceptions of respectability 62
CONTENTS

4 Painting nostalgia: dress and the vision of a vanishing rural world 70
   The development of agricultural landscape painting 73
   England's green and pleasant land: dress in agricultural landscape paintings 79

5 Photography and rural dress: 'work of art' or documentary realism? 87
   The photograph as a work of art and the representation of landscape 89
   Photography, rural dress and the picturesque 96

6 Clothing and the 'counter-myth' in images of rural England 103
   Peter Henry Emerson and 'truth to nature' 104
   The influence of realism and naturalism on the representation of the rural labourer 108
   Dress in the work of George Clausen 113

7 Thomas Hardy: tradition, fashion and the approach of modernity 125
   Clothing in fiction 127
   A discourse of change 128
   Rural dress, 'fashion' and the urban 132

8 Rural working-class dress: survival, representation and change 143
   Obstacles to survival 144
   Representations of rural working-class dress and museum collections 148
   Male working-class clothing 155
   Female working-class clothing 163
   Conclusion: clothing and landscape 169

Notes 174
Bibliography 198
Index 206