

Introduction

Historiographical Introduction: A Genealogy of Approaches

The construction and the study of the fertility decline in Britain: social science and history

The Professional Model of Social Classes: An Intellectual History

Social classification of occupations and the GRO in the nineteenth century

Social classification and nineteenth-century naturalistic social science

The emergence of a social explanation of class inequalities among environmentalists, 1901-1904

The emergence of the professional model as the official system of social classification, 1905-1928

A New Analysis of the 1911 Census Occupational Fertility Data

A test of the coherence of the professional model of class-differential fertility decline

Multiple fertility declines in Britain: occupational variation in completed fertility and nuptiality

How was fertility controlled? The spacing versus stopping debate and the culture of abstinence

Conceptions and Refutations

A general approach to fertility change and the history of falling fertilities in England and Wales

Social class, communities, gender and nationalism in the study of fertility change

Appendices

Bibliography

Index

Table of Contents provided by Blackwell's Book Services and R.R. Bowker. Used with permission.