Towards a nondirective compromise
The nondirective compromise
Contested rationalities
Saviour siblings and treating people as a means
Facts and regulations
The logic of the case
What could justify invasive procedures?
Why would noninvasive procedures be a problem?
Rational consent and genetic privacy
Means, mere means, and outcomes
Means, individuals, and values
Green's three readings of Kant
Ends and means: two different principles?
Saving rationalities
Reproductive cloning and designing human beings
An almost universal condemnation
Distinctions and politics
The case for cautious progress
Arguments for an absolute prohibition
Lack of limits and defective individuals
Asexual reproduction and distorted families
Project of mastery and misshapen communities
Loss of mystery and perverted societies
Forsaken self-understanding and a confused species
Design for a transhuman world
Cloning rationalities
Embryonic stem cells, vulnerability, and sanctity
What, why, and how regulated?
Alternatives and conjectures
Connections with ethical challenges
Would women be unnecessarily used?
Would women be unfairly used?
Would women be wrongfully used?
The destruction of embryos is always wrong
The destruction of embryos is never wrong
The destruction of embryos is sometimes wrong
Embryonic rationalities
Gene therapies, hopes, and fears
Trials and errors
Somatic and germ-line interventions
Table of Contents provided by Blackwell's Book Services and R.R. Bowker. Used with permission.