
DRUGS AND THE ELDERLY

Clinical, Social, and Policy Perspectives

::

Helene Levens Lipton, Ph.D.

Philip R. Lee, M.D.

with contributions by

Mark S. Freeland, Ph.D.

::

Stanford University Press :: Stanford, California

1988

Contents

Foreword, by Jere E. Goyan ix
Preface xiii

PART ONE

Drugs and the Aging Person

- 1 Drug Therapy for the Elderly: The Importance of Biological Changes with Age 3
- 2 Patterns of Geriatric Drug Use and Factors Affecting Use 20
- 3 Geriatric Drug Misuse and Its Prevention: The Role of the Physician, the Pharmacist, and the Patient 35
- 4 Inappropriate Drug Use by the Elderly: The Problem of Noncompliance and Some Potential Solutions 60

PART TWO

Drug Economics and Regulation

- 5 Drug Costs and the Elderly 85
- 6 Drug Testing, Marketing, and Surveillance: The Role of the Food and Drug Administration 118

PART THREE

Sources of Drug Information for Health Professionals and Elderly Consumers

- 7 Education and Sources of Drug Information for Physicians and Pharmacists 135
- 8 Innovative Drug Information Programs and Resources for Elderly Consumers 149

PART FOUR

Drug Policy and Demographics

- 9 Drugs and the Elderly: Program and Policy
Recommendations 169

Appendix A. Drugs and the Elderly: Future Projections 185
The Authors and Mark S. Freeland

Appendix B. The Impact of Alternative Population Projections on Use, Price, and Spending for Prescription Drugs 204
The Authors and Mark S. Freeland

Bibliography 221

Index 255