

Table of Contents

Executive Summary	5
Abbreviations	8
Acknowledgments	10
1. Introduction	11
2. Operationalizing the Concept of Sustainable Development	14
2.1. Genesis of Sustainable Development – Environment and Poverty	15
2.2. The Brundtland Definition of Sustainable Development	18
2.3. An Approach to an Operationalizable Definition of Sustainable Development	21
2.4. Towards Sustainable Development Assessment	22
3. Climate Change, Kyoto Protocol and the Clean Development Mechanism	26
3.1. Anthropogenic Climate Change	26
3.2. The Idea of Kyoto – A Global Answer to a Global Problem	30
3.3. The CDM and its Sustainable Development Dimension	37
4. Analysis of the CDM Framework – Ensuring Sustainable Development?	47
4.1. The Need for a Framework to Guarantee Minimal Sustainable Development Standards	47
4.2. Host Country Approval	48
4.3. Stakeholder Rules within the CDM – Guaranteeing Sustainable Development?	51
4.4. Monitoring Process	53
4.5. Conclusion: Structural Dysfunction – A Race to the Bottom	54
5. Sustainable Development Problems in the CDM	56
5.1. Market Survey – The Crowding Out	56
5.2. Sustainable Development Assessment on the Project Level	65
6. Sustainable Development Assessment for CDM Projects	66
6.1. South South North – Sustainable Development Appraisal Tool	67
6.2. The Gold Standard	71
6.3. Sustainability Check-Up	75
7. Sustainable Development Analysis of Hydro CDM Projects	80
7.1. Methodological Approach	80
7.2. Analysis of UNFCCC Pipeline	82
7.3. Case Study Honduras	88
7.4. Drawing Conclusion from the Analysis of Hydro CDM Projects	93
8. Conclusion and Recommendations	94
8.1. Conclusion	94
8.2. Recommendations – Improving the CDM’s Sustainable Development Performance	97
Literature	98
List of Tables and Figures	108
Appendices	109