Liliana Sikorska (ed.)

History is Mostly Repair and Revenge

Discourses of/on History in Literature in English

PETER LANG
Internationaler Verlag der Wissenschaften
Contents

Editorial ................................................................................................................................................. 7

1. Liliana Sikorska (Adam Mickiewicz University, Poznań/Academy of Management, Warsaw)
   Adam Thorpe. An introduction .................................................................................................................. 9

2. Adam Thorpe (Nîmes)
   Turning the confusion into art: History and fiction .................................................................................. 13

3. Sabine Heinz (Adam Mickiewicz University, Poznań)
   Major developments of the English literatures in Ireland and Wales and their interplay with history .................................................................................................................. 25

4. Frank Swannack (University of Salford, Manchester)
   The abuse of History in Marlowe’s Tamburlaine part one and Spenser’s A view of the state of Ireland .................................................................................................................. 43

5. Neus Rotger (Universitat Autònoma de Barcelona/ Universitat Oberta de Catalunya)
   The uses of history in the early Gothic romance ....................................................................................... 57

6. Joanna Maciulewicz (Adam Mickiewicz University, Poznań/Academy of Management Warsaw)
   “Questions of things done in Publick as well as in Private”: The analysis of Daniel Defoe’s Memoirs of a cavalier .................................................................................................................. 69

7. Maria Fengler (University of Gdańsk)
   Revising the rising: Irish history in Roddy Doyle’s A star called Henry .................................................. 79

8. Łukasz Giezek (Wyższa Szkoła Filologiczna, Wrocław)
   Eternal past: Peter Ackroyd’s rewriting of history in The Lambs of London ........................................... 89

9. Ryszard Bartnik (Adam Mickiewicz University, Poznań)
   (Im)possibility of escape – traumatic residues of the past in the post-Troubles Northern Irish novel .................................................................................................................. 101

10. Marcin Cieniuch (Adam Mickiewicz University, Poznań)
    To will one myth out, to will a different one into history – contemporary Irish history written through the classics in the poetry of Michael Longley and Seamus Heaney ............................................................... 113
10. Grzegorz Czemiel (University of Warsaw)
   "History's broken mirrors": Ciaran Carson's and Paul Muldoon's re-dressing of the past ................................................................. 127

11. Liliana Sikorska (Adam Mickiewicz University, Poznań/Academy of Management, Warsaw)
   "The free and easy": An interview with Anne Haverty .......................... 139