

---

Contents

	Acknowledgments	ix
	Note on Romanization	xiii
PART ONE: SETTINGS
1	The Eye/I	3
	The “Setting” Trope	7
	How the Problem Emerged	9
	Japanese Selves and Their Challenge to the “Whole Subject”	26
	Displacing the Binary: Anthropological Studies of The Self	33
2	Industries, Communities, Identities	49
	The Industrial Context, Firm Size, and Identity	49
	Shitamachi and Yamanote	57
3	Disciplined Selves	76
	The Ethics Retreat	78
	A Day at the Center	83
	Special Events	95
	Theories of Selfhood: The Dialectic of Form and Feeling	104
	Japanese Selves and the Ethics Doctrines	110
PART TWO: FAMILY AS COMPANY, COMPANY AS FAMILY
4	Circles of Attachment	119
	Households: Ie as Obligation	121
	Circles of Attachment: Uchi as Feeling	141
5	Adding the Family Flavor	161
	Merchants and Artisans: The Familial Embrace	162
	The Satō Company: Company as Family?	175

	So Does It Work?	182
	Yoso : The Company Networks	191
6	Company as Family?	199
	Uchi no Kaisha : Contested Meanings	202
	Resistance?	218
PART THREE: GENDER AND WORK IDENTITIES
7	The Aesthetics and Politics of Artisanal Identities	229
	Meaning, Power, and Work Identities	230
	Artisanal Idioms of Work: A collective Story	234
	Work and the Material World	241
	Hierarchy, Exclusion, and an Idiom under Siege	247
	The Aesthetics and Politics of Identity	255
8	Uchi, Gender, and Part-Time Work	258
	Stories of Work	260
	The Discursive Field	264
	Work and Its Meanings	277
	Commitment to Uchi : Company or Family?	285
	Gendered Identities and the Workings of Power	293
9	The Stakes	300
	Notes	309
	References	329
	Index	341