

Contents

Acknowledgements	ix
Notes on the contributors	xi
1 Introduction Don Lavoie	1
Part I What is hermeneutics?
2 Towards the native's point of view: the difficulty of changing the conversation Arjo Klamer	19
3 Getting beyond objectivism: the philosophical hermeneutics of Gadamer and Ricoeur G.B. Madison	34
Part II Alternative views of economics from a particular philosophical standpoint: hermeneutics 'appropriated' by neoclassicism, institutionalism, critical theory, and Austrian economics
4 Storytelling in economics Donald N. McCloskey	61
5 The philosophical bases of institutionalist economics Philip Mirowski	76
6 The scope and goals of economic science: a Habermasian perspective Jon D. Wisman	113
7 Austrian economics: a hermeneutic approach Ludwig M. Lachmann	134

Part III Alternative views of hermeneutics from a particular economic standpoint: the controversy in the Austrian school

- 8 Practical syllogism, entrepreneurship, and the invisible hand: a critique of the analytic hermeneutics of G.H. von Wright
Uskali Mäki 149
- 9 What is a price? Explanation and understanding (with apologies to Paul Ricoeur)
Richard M. Ebeling 177
- 10 The economics of rationality and the rationality of economics
Ralph A. Rector 195

Part IV Hermeneutical reason: applications in macro, micro, and public policy

- 11 On the microfoundations of money: Walrasian and Mengerian approaches reconsidered in light of Richard Rorty's critique of foundationalism
Randall Kroszner 239
- 12 Self-interpretation, attention, and language: implications for economics of Charles Taylor's hermeneutics
Lawrence A. Berger 262
- 13 What a non-Paretian welfare economics would have to look like
Tyler Cowen 285
- 14 The hermeneutical view of freedom: implications of Gadamerian understanding for economic policy
Tom G. Palmer 299
- Index* 319