

Contents

---

Acknowledgements	xi
Abbreviations	xiii
Series editor's introduction	xv
1 Criminology, industrial conflict and the miners' strike	1
Introduction: a history of neglect	1
Criminology and the grip of 'new realism'	3
British criminology and the miners' strike	5
Class consciousness and policing	5
Conclusion	7
2 The strike and its context	9
Introduction	9
Policing industrial conflict: the lessons of history	10
The Featherstone Riots 1893	10
The Llanelli Riots 1911	11
The General Strike 1926	12
Policing the Depression	16
The post-war British political economy: from boom to recession	19
Heath 1970–74: crisis management	20
Social contracts and the Labour Party	23
Thatcher: term one	28
Thatcher: term two	30
Preparations for confrontation	32

The government	32
The union	34
The Nottinghamshire coalfield	35
The strike in profile	37
3 Miners and the police	45
Introduction	45
Attitudes: past and present	46
Experiences of change	50
The thick blue line	50
Police confrontation: violence and frustration	52
Police tactics	54
The process of arrest	56
Police powers and civil liberties	60
Political detention	63
Policing and the question of 'fairness'	64
Working miners and the police	65
The politics of strike-policing	66
A police state?	68
Police, violence and industrial conflict	71
The policing and its effects: behaviour and consciousness	73
Conclusion	78
4 Miners and the law	83
Introduction	83
Civil law–criminal law: an illusory distinction?	85
Industrial disputes and the law	89
Law as an arena of struggle	93
Bail conditions: a tactical weapon	95
The court process	97
Legal representation	103
A new consciousness: law, society and industrial conflict	104
Conclusion	107
5 Government, employers and welfare	110
Introduction	110
Puppets and puppeteers	111
Policing by local management	113
Working miners and the NCB	117
Policing through welfare	120
Military intervention	124
Government intent	125
Conclusion	129

6 Trade union officials: policing by bureaucracy	133
Introduction: a role of social regulation	133
Divisions and vacillations: area leadership	135
Branch officials	141
Scargill and the national executive	143
Rank-and-file organization	146
The strike committee	146
The Ollerton Women's Action Group	150
The trade union movement and the TUC	151
Conclusion	155
7 Miners and the mass media	157
Introduction: the policing of ideas	157
What they read, what they watched	159
Striking miners	159
Women	160
Working miners	161
Changing opinions of the media	161
Distortion, sensationalism and bias	164
The role of the mass media	168
The lessons drawn	171
Neutral and autonomous?	173
Conclusion	175
8 Class consciousness, policing and the Ollerton striking community	178
Introduction	178
Class consciousness: a theoretical overview	180
Policing: an amplifier of consciousness	181
Class consciousness and the miners	183
Divisions and unevenness	187
Picketing and non-picketing strikers	188
Women	188
Working miners	190
Trade unions, reformism and class consciousness	192
The revolutionary party and class consciousness	195
Conclusion	197
Appendix The fieldwork	201
Introduction	201
The setting	201
Policing and class consciousness: a methodology	202
The interview	204

Participant observation	207
Partisanship and points of caution	208
Notes	210
A selected bibliography	213
Index	225