

CONTENTS

Series Foreword	vii
Acknowledgement	viii
Introduction	1
1 What Is a Drug Problem?	3
The history of drug use: new drugs for old	4
What are drugs?	6
Two stereotypes	8
Defining the problem	11
Summary	13
2 How Prevalent Is Drug Use amongst Young People?	14
Measuring prevalence	14
What does prevalence mean?	15
Counting heads or assessing the problem?	18
Community- and school-based prevalence studies	19
Summary	29
3 Myths about Drug Addiction	31
Drug myths in the media	31
Who asks the questions?	33
Research findings	36
Attribution theory: are answers to questions primarily functional?	45
Sources and implications of the myths	48
Summary	49
4 What Can Teachers and Parents Do to Prevent Drug Problems?	51
Drug education: different approaches	51
Fear-arousal and information-based strategies	52

The life skills approach	55
Harm-reduction	57
How effective is drug education?	58
Summary	62
5 The Way Forward	63
The ball and chain	63
What about the pharmacology of drug action?	64
A change of heart	66
Practical considerations	67
A change of educational practice	69
A change of policy	71
Summary	76
Conclusions	77
References	81
Index	86